KLAMATH FALLS, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1909.

CRATER LAKE A MYSTERY

apparently are unaffected by the spring floods from the mountain peaks or the droughts of the long summer months. Never changing, the lake forms a gigantic mirror wherein are faithfully noted every change of zephyr, of mountain wind, of cloud and of atmosphere.

The lake was discovered in 1853 by John A. Hillman and a party of prospectors. Because of its ultra-marine blue waters it was then named Deep Blue lake. It has since been known as Lake Mystery, Lake Majesty, Hole in the Ground, and finally Crater lake, which most naturally describes it.

Until recently the huge remains of the mountain containing Crater lake had no name. During the summer of 1896 the Mazamas, a mountain-climbing club of Oregon, visited Crater lake and christened the mountain Mount Mazama. Almost nothing was known of the lake and its surroundings, however, until 1895, when W. G. Steele, a mountaineer of Oregon, started a movement to have this region created a national park.

In January, 1896, President Cleveland signed a proclamation withdrawing ten townships from the market, but on account of strong opposition the bill was not passed, and the project lay dormant for many years.

Mr. Steele practically gave his entire time and energy to the project, and during the sessions of congress which were held in 1901 and 1902 he succeeded in arousing the whole population of the State of Oregon, and thus secured the passage of the bill creating the Crater Lake National park.

President Roosevelt presented Mr. Steele with the fountain pen which he used to sign the bill. Recently Mr. Steele has been placed in charge of the reservation, and is devoting his entire time to exploiting it and making it accessible to tourists.

Indian Legends Are Interesting.

The Indian legends regarding Crater lake, should they ever be completely written, would make an interesting story book. Until recently very few Indians have gazed into the depth of the lake.

They have ever been awe-stricken in its presence, and they believe it to be the dwelling place of the great spirit and to be inhabited by monsters called "Ilaos."

They believe that whoever gazes on the lake will die and be dragged into its depths, there to feed the monster or dragon which dwells therein. This belief was enhanced by the sudden death of an army officer who fell dead while gazing for the first time upon the lake.

It is possible that the Indian belief regarding the monster they believe inhabits the lake is due to a peculiar phenomenon caused by air currents. Not infrequently when looking from the rim on the waters of the lake there comes into view, seemingly, a monstrous dragon, which apparently lies close to the surface of the water, and whose head and body gently oscillate from side to side.

So startlingly lifelike is this illusion that many white men who have seen it have insisted strenuously that it was in reality the dragon. Careful investigation has shown that the illusion is due to the air currents which ruffle the surface of the lake irregularly, thereby producing an apparition which takes the form of a dragon.

Crater lake is slightly elliptical in shape, and 5 1/2 miles in diameter at its widest point. Near the shore on the western side is a huge cinder cone, remarkably symmetrical in form and rising 845 feet above the lake. It is known as Wizard Island, and it has a crater of its own which is fully 100 feet deep, and contains snow during the greater part of the year.

At present the most pleasing method of reaching Crater lake is by railroad to Klamath Falls. From this point there is a journey by boat consuming the greater part of the day on Upper Klamath lake. This lake is one of the most beautiful in the West.

Leaving the lake near the Klamath Indian reservation, there is a stage ride of twelve miles through beautiful forests to Fort Klamath. From Fort Klamath the distance is twenty-two miles, the road leading through one of the most picturesque valleys of the West, fraught with interesting history of early Modoc Indian wars, and then into the Crater Lake National park.

For a large part of the distance the road winds along the brink of Anna creek canyon and through forest of primeval beauty.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETING

The school board of District No. 1 held a meeting at which the following members were present: J. V. Siemens, F. Sanderson, P. L. Fountain and Professor Dunbar.

The health officer was instructed to inspect the schools at least once a month, and oftener, if necessary.

An arrangement was also entered into with Messrs. Bolter and Shipley of this city to haul the school children from the Upper lake section to the public school. The rate agreed upon for this service is $72 per month for thirty scholars. A covered bus is to be furnished. This arrangement will obviate the necessity of erecting a school building on the Upper lake and on account of the limited number of pupils there at present is more desirable all around.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The freshmen chorus class met this morning and practiced the first time with the new song books, which have just arrived.

The class is making good headway and we feel that it will make one of the best singing classes the High School has had for years.

Helping the Town . . .

By banking your money in a bank in your own community you increase the community's power to do business. If substantial farmers want to borrow money there is more to loan them. If you bank your money away from home it is loaned to other farmers, merchants and manufacturers. Help your home people. Money hidden at home helps no one. Placed in a bank it is put to work in ways that help all.

The First National Bank of Klamath Falls is a good bank to put your money in—safe and reliable.

A Savings Account . . .

is a rainy day fund, a life insurance policy, a sick benefit, a funeral benefit, and an old age pension. There is no forfeiture clause in the passbook, and it is under the owner's control at all times. It will tide him over sickness; it will care for his family when he must go; it will see him through old age, and bury him when he dies. It is a simple business proposition. Begin early, and keep it up, and, like manna in the desert, it will supply him as he journeys.

Now is the time to open an account with the
