

Special Announcement to the Public

I have now taken over the entire stock of the Boston Store from Mr. Jacobs, the former proprietor, and will endeavor to treat everyone fairly and will always maintain the lowest possible price at which good goods can be legitimately sold. One thing in particular I wish to impress upon you is that I have absolutely ONE PRICE. A child can trade here as safely as an adult. We guarantee everything you purchase from us to be just as represented, and if for any reason you become dissatisfied with your purchase or you find any fault with the goods bought you may return it, if in saleable condition, and have your money refunded or exchange for other goods. I want you to feel that this is your store, and any suggestions you may make will be greatly appreciated. Trusting to be favored with a portion of your valuable patronage, am, yours truly,

O. M. HECTOR, Successor to L. Jacobs

BELIEVE IN THE FATES.

Greek Peasants and the Rule of the Moral Over Children.

The peasantry of Greece firmly believe that the future of every child is determined by the three fates, known by the name of the Moirai. In the popular mind this trio of fates are supposed to be three old and wrinkled women whose habitation is a mountain cave. They come simultaneously to a house where a new baby has made its appearance, says the London Globe.

When they are expected all furniture is set aside so that their aged and tottering feet may not be hindered, and refreshments in the shape of honey cakes, bread and wine are placed ready for these important though invisible guests. Money, too, is placed for them as a bribe to get their favor for the baby, so that his future may be one long, sweet song, the superstition being that all things good and bad are in the giving of the fates.

On no account must the child's beauty be alluded to when the Moirai are present, as this will certainly make its good looks disappear. Marks on a baby's skin are looked upon as sent by these harbingers of weal or woe.

Ill luck is supposed to be the lot of the children who cut their upper teeth first. There are one or two African tribes who so firmly believe this that they are said to kill all babies but those whose lower teeth appear first. Another race of people in the dark continent see all the signs of bad fortune in twins, and so they avoid it by slaying all of them.

THE SEA LION.

This Queer Beast is the Owner of Four Huge Livers.

The head of the sea lion at close quarters is a blunt, rough, savage brow. It is well armed for battle, the mouth being an eight inch half circle studded with two rows of great sharp teeth. The body is heavily coated with seal brown hair, sun bleached to light yellow on the back and sides. The immensely long hind flippers have big strong claws interlocked in the flat upper surface several inches from the ends of the flipper. The fore flippers have the openings for these nails or claws, but in the particular female I dissected they were lacking.

"The transparent wily fellows about the jaw are much esteemed by the Chinese as toothpicks. About two dozen of these sensitive guards project from the upper-lip. The ears are very small, not as large as a common cat's, and much depressed. The eyes are a deep, soft brown, but they can sparkle like flame in anger. When the dissecting knife laid the skin back we encountered a heavy layer of fat—rich, oily and fish smelling. The heart was very large, fully as big as a cow's, and the beast also owned four huge livers a foot and a half long. The meat is very red and, although eaten by the coast tribes, is too coarse and redolent of fish oil for any save a starving white. In fact, the whole beast has a most repulsive odor when in the sun. Freshly drawn from the water this is not noticeable. —Wide World Magazine.

Greatness is the ability to meet the unexpected. —Stowell.

The Kettledrum in Music.

In a lecture delivered at the Royal Society of Arts by Gabriel Cleather on the "Musical Aspect of Drums" it was contended that the kettledrum was one of the few perfect instruments in the orchestra, owing to the exactness of its scale. The kettledrum, he contended, was perfectly competent to produce atmosphere as well as rhythm. Even to tune the instrument three things were required—a perfect musical ear, a fine sense of touch and five years' experience. After playing over a kettledrum melody, written eighty years ago, from Meyerbeer's "Robert le Diable," Mr. Cleather continued, "I venture to say that, outside the musical profession, not one person in a hundred of those who listen to an orchestra in England today knows that tympani have notes and can give out a melody." No instrument, he added, had a greater range of power than the kettledrum, for none could be played more softly, and none had greater penetrating power. —Dundee Advertiser.

Story or Gormon?

"I was telling Baby Hilda a fairy story one night," said the sky pilot. "Baby Hilda is my little girl. The story was all about another little girl who was chased by bears and who ran to the edge of a steep mountain and jumped off. No, she didn't die. The minute she jumped off she turned into a bird with wings and flew. That was the story."

"Baby Hilda thought awhile about it, then she looked up and said, 'Papa, is that story true or was it just preaching?'" —New York Press.

Our Shaping.

"Chance shapes our destinies," quoted the wise guy.

"Well, all I have to say is that some of us have mighty poor shapes," added the simple mug. —Philadelphia Record.

An Athletic Game.

The cobbler's shop in a small village was filled with old men and a young man, the young man being a good football player. Naturally the conversation drifted to the game of football.

The young man turned to one of the old men and asked him if he had ever played the game. The veteran thoughtfully blew a cloud of tobacco smoke from his lips and replied:

"Nay, lad, I've never played at none o' them athletic games 'cept dominoes." —London Mail.

Her Qualification.

Father—Now, look here, you girls—when you grow up one of you must be able to speak French and the other German. Brenda—All right, dad, and Muriel had better learn German, because she can gargle best. —Punch.

Assuring.

Have courage, count. Father won't hurt you! Why, he told me only yesterday that if he had to pay so much for you he certainly wouldn't do anything to damage you. —Life.

Equality may be all right, but no human power can convert it into a fact. —Ruskin.
