TAPA CLOTH.

Attire of the Native Hawaiians Before Civilization Arrived.

The "paper mulberry" tree (Broussonetia papyrifera) is the source of the famous "tapa cloth" of the Polynesian islands. This is a natural tissue and is derived from the inner bark and after being torn off in strips is scraped with shells and beaten with a mallet until it resembles a soft, flexible paper. The individual strips are united by overlapping the edges and beating the fibers together until large pieces of the tissue are formed.

It is said that before Hawaii was swept with the wave of civilization men and women were dressed in this natural bark cloth "tapa" or "kapa." The dress of the women consists of the "pa-u," or wrapper, composed of five thicknesses of tapa, about four yards in length by three in width, passed several times around the waist and extending below the knee. The dress of the men was the "malu," or girdle, about a foot in width and several yards long. A "kikel," or mantle, six feet square, was sometimes worn by both sexes. In former years these natural cloths were sometimes bleached to snowy whiteness or were dyed in colors and even printed or ornamented usually in checks or squares. — Exchange.

A Practical Demonstration.
"The best way to study nature is to go right to it."
"I suppose so."
"Oh, I know it. I was once disposed to doubt the industry of the ant, of which so much is said."
"And you learned better?"
"I did. I had a controversy with a naturalist over the question, and I thought I had him beaten until he gave me a demonstration."
"Took you out and showed you the ants at work, did he?"
"Well, not exactly that, but he took me along on one of his scientific expeditions and then maliciously pitched my tent over an ant hill. By the time I discovered what was happening the conviction was forced upon me that ants are really and truly industrious. They are small, but they made me move, and some of them went right along with us to the next camping place." — New York Times.

The Average.
"Pa, what's an average man?"
"One who thinks his employer's business would be run a good deal better if he could have more to say in the matter himself."
The owl may not be as wise as he looks, but he is wise enough not to try to work both the night and day shifts. — Atchison Globe.

It is the little pleasures which make life sweet, as the little displeasures may do more than afflictions can to make it bitter.

Consider a secret to a dumb man and it will make him speak. — Livonian

As Walter Saw It.

Walter, aged seven, is a wise son who knows not only his own father, but his own mother likewise.

"Now, Walter," said the teacher, "if your father could do a piece of work in one hour and your mother could also do it in one hour, how long would it take both of them to do it together?"
"Three hours," replied the scholar without hesitation.

"Wrong!" said the teacher. "How do you make that?"
"Three hours," repeated Walter stolidly, "counting the time they'd waste arguing about how it should be done."
— London Scraps.

All Marriages Are Love Marriages.

"Was it a love marriage, do you think?"
"Certainly. All marriages are love marriages."
"Isn't that rather a sweeping statement?"
"Not at all. There is a love of adventure, you know; love of luxury, love of advertising and various other kinds of love. There is no need of going into details when one speaks of a love marriage." — Chicago Post.

As to Luck.

"I wonder if anybody's as unlucky as I am," grumbled the first pessimist.

"I never have any luck at all."
"Hah," snorted the other. "You're lucky. It's better to never have any luck at all than to be always having bad luck like me." — Philadelphia Press.

DRILLING FOR WATER

Scarcely enough can be said in commendation of the work being done at Dry Prairie by J. R. Edler, whose sheep range from Merrill to Harney lake. The artesian well borer which recently arrived by railroad is now in operation near Keno Springs. Though Edler himself, as is only right, will receive immense benefits, what it means to the settlers and homesteaders of that banner flat can hardly be estimated. Every spring after the snow water disappears, the grass and feed in that country withers and dies for lack of water. The sheep must leave, and the cattle soon follow, and save for an occasional stray band of horses no stock can feed there during the hot summer months. Now, with the wells that Mr. Edler is sinking all this will be changed. For several years past Mr. Edler has used this prairie every spring for his lambing ground, but has been forced to move for lack of food before the summer set in. With water and possible irrigation the land will be fruitful all summer. The few homesteaders there will be greatly benefited, as they well know. In a few years this barren tract, flat as a pool table, will be changed from a desert into a fertile garden through the efforts of the biggest sheepman in Southern Oregon.

THIS CITY WILL BECOME COMMERCIAL METROPOLIS

Portland Journal Boosts the Chief City of Southern Oregon.

The following editorial from the columns of the Portland Journal gives some idea of the favorable light in which Klamath Falls stands. It is such faith in her future that is going to make this city, as the Journal truthfully says, "the commercial metropolis of Southeastern Oregon."

"A big store at Klamath Falls has undertaken a worthy effort to show the resources of the country tributary to the town by setting aside space for a display of the products of farm, orchard, shop and mill. It is said that the display has surprised even the most optimistic settler of that new country.

"Klamath Falls is located in a new country, with the railroad line less than a year old. Until recently the section was considered fit only for the stockman and the herder, with alfalfa as cheap winter feed. The old delusion seems to be fast disappearing. Klamath Falls promises to become the commercial metropolis of Southeastern Oregon, largely by reason of its ideal location. Once the country settles a large population will center about the place, and the town will profit by the efforts now made to induce settlement and proper cultivation.

"An exhibit of fruits, grains and grasses kept constantly before the public will have the effect of encouraging diversified farming, of promoting more scientific cultivation of the soil and showing to the world the mystifying results of the mixture of sand and water."

What Would He Do With It?

A farmer owned a dog—a very good, high bred and thoroughly trained dog—that every morning for three years chased a railway train that ran past the farm. The farmer and his wife were watching the persistent but vain pursuit one warm morning.
"I wonder," the wife said, "what makes that foolish dog chase the train so persistently?"
"Never thought about that," replied the farmer, "but I've often wondered what he would do if he caught it."

The Audience.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

In the County Court of the County of Klamath, State of Oregon.

In the Matter of the Guardianship of Daisy Bessie Slater, a Minor.

Now, on this 5th day of September, 1909, this Court having read and considered the petition heretofore filed and now presented herein by August Bueasing, guardian of the person and estate of Daisy Bessie Slater, a minor, praying for an order for the sale of certain real estate belonging to said ward, and it appearing therefrom that said real estate should be sold:

It is hereby ordered—That the next of kin of said ward, or minor, and all persons interested in the said estate, appear before this Court on the 3d day of November, 1909, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the courtroom of this Court, at Klamath Falls, Klamath County, Oregon, then and there to show cause, if any they have, why an order should not be granted for the sale of such real estate, described in said petition, to-wit: An undivided one-eighth interest as heir at law of Thomas Slater, deceased, in and to the Northwest quarter of the Northeast quarter of Section 35, Township 23 south of Range 19 west, Willamette Meridian, in Douglas county, Oregon.

And it is further ordered that service of this order be made by publication thereof for the period of three weeks beginning with the 5th day of October, 1909, in the Evening Herald, a daily newspaper of general circulation, published at Klamath Falls, Oregon.

Dated this 5th day of October, 1909. J. B. GRIFFITH,

10-5-10-24 County Judge.
