is based on its education. The wealthy nation is the educated nation. Where it pays to spend one dollar on education now, the future will find it pays to spend two, three or four. The greatest factor in determining the destiny of a state or nation is the mind. The most important problem is its development.
Tuesday Morning Session
The session Tuesday morning was highly profitable to those who attended. After singing and recitation Prof. L. A. Alderman talked on "Some Don'ts in Teaching," some of which were: (1) Don't say "Don't." (2) Don't neglect school grounds. (3) Don't neglect walls, floor, etc. (4) Don't fail to get acquainted with the home. (5) Don't neglect to take professional papers and to read inspirational books. (6) Don't fail to be cheerful. (7) Don't forget to have a plan in school life and a reason for it. (8) Don't get old.
In the course of the lecture a list of good inspirational books was worked out, some of which were: "Jean Mitchell's School," "Emmy Lou," "Phelps and His Teacher," "The Evolution of Dodd," "The Making of an American," "The School and Its Life," "The Heart of a Boy," "Mrs. O'Calligan's Boys," "Little Citizens," "A Man Without a Country," "How a Private Put Down the Rebellion," "The Boy Life of Napoleon," "Kentucky Cardinal and Aftermath," "A Pot of Green Feathers."

Mr. Resler followed with a most pleasing address on "Philosophy of Life." He says we are all dreamers of dreams and seers of visions, but

FINAL ACCOUNT NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that Martha Frances Willis, administratrix of the estate of James Calvin Sigler, deceased, having on July 17, 1907, filed her final report in said matter, and on the 21st of October, 1909, filed her supplementary final report and account in said matter, with the clerk of the county court of Klamath county, Oregon, the said court did, by order made and entered on the 21st day of October, 1909, appoint Saturday, November 20th, 1909, at the hour of 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the courthouse of said county and state in Klamath Falls, Oregon, as the time and place for the hearing of said settlement of said accounts and estate.

urges us not to lose the real enjoyment of life as we go along. He preaches the "heaven of the now" and revises the Roosevelt doctrine of "Work while you work and play while you play" to "Play while you work and work while you play." We should not only take joy into our work, but system and purpose into our recreation.

The last period of the morning session was devoted to department work, where some good and helpful things were said.

School Board Convention
The School Board convention, called by Superintendent Swan to meet Monday, November 1st, met in the office at the public school building. A number of the school officers of the county responded to the call, and a very successful meeting was held, and all present hopes that effort will be made next year to secure a larger attendance. The school officers of the county are taking much interest in school work and are anxious to improve their respective schools.

Superintendent Ackerman led in a discussion of school sanitation and school buildings. He emphasized the necessity of providing suitable ventilation and showed by what simple means this can be accomplished. By using window boards and such devices, air may be introduced without causing drafts. He also answered many questions asked by the school officers. One interesting question, asked by Mr. R. W. Tower and discussed with interest, was "When can some industrial work be introduced into our schools?" The idea was advanced that the schools of a county could have an expert agriculturist, who would travel from school to school and teach and supervise work in agriculture in the rural schools. This will be done before long.

Prof. L. R. Alderman addressed the convention on "How to Hire and Keep Teachers." He called attention to the bad effects of frequent change of teachers in rural schools. He emphasized the necessity of the Board's personally investigating the applicants. Little attention should be paid to recommendations, but confidential inquiries should be sent to former boards. He then emphasized the necessity of making conditions such as to keep a good teacher, such as having building in good condition, providing funds for the small things that are necessary, and aiding her in securing a good boarding place.

Prof. E. D. Resler discussed the necessity of training schools for teachers. He suggested the possibilities of doing training work in the High Schools. The officers present entered into the discussion and the expression was general that Oregon should provide normal training for the teachers.

The convention selected Mr. P. L. Fountain as president for the ensuing year. The officers agreed that those present would be considered as a committee to appear before the county court in January and urge the necessity of more funds for the schools. The feeling is general throughout the county that the schools need more funds to make the schools efficient.

NEW PICTURES AT THE IRIN

"Winning a Princess." The king or Cordonia promises to give the hand of his daughter to whoever will kill the evil spirit, a horrible monster haunting the mountains adjacent to his country. Two men declare themselves as aspirants to the honor, one a warrior bold and the other a poet, the latter the favorite of the princess. The poet befriends a sorcerer, and is rewarded with a magic arrow, with which he can kill the beast.

"Miss Simpson's Attractiveness." Miss Simpson has a nervous contraction of the face that makes her smile at every man she meets. Aside from being very annoying to the lady, it causes serious complications, giving rise to a great deal of merriment.

"A Royal Outcast" is a splendid drama from the Vitagraph company. "Liberty for an Hour," and "The Judge's Whiskers" are two more good pictures to add interest to the program. Views and an illustrated song.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE

"The Evil That Men Do" lives after them, and even while they are still on earth the sorrow and suffering that may be caused by one false step cannot be calculated. "Saved From Conviction" by the merest chance after a net of circumstantial evidence had been thrown around him and his escape from hanging seemed impossible is the thrilling experience of one man. "A Case of Lumbago" is, to say the least, highly uncomfortable, but imagine the agony of dancing with all the girls trying to make your lot even more miserable. "Holding Up the Wedding" while the groom is in a beer garden celebrating and drinking the health of the luckless bride, who, trusting in his love, is waiting at the church, can hardly be termed exquisitely polite. "Sweet-toothed Dogs" cause a good deal of annoyance to an old gentleman and his little poodle before they are finally called home by the owners, who add insult to injury by accusing the old gentleman of attempting to steal the many dogs he has vainly been running from.

L. C. Croyle, a delightful old Dutchman, is in town from his ranch at Grass Valley in Sherman county. He was recently given the contract for supplying the beef for Erickson & Patterson's railroad camps and for the sawmills at the Upper lake. Saturday he paid $750 for a trotting mare which he intends racing next season.

THE CASSOWARY.

A Peculiar Bird That Piques With Its Feathers.

Habits of the cormorant and of the fish hawk are generally known. Their methods of taking fish are very much like those of birds of prey. But the cassowary fishes according to a method of its own. A well known naturalist witnessed its operations on a river in the island of New Britain.

He saw a cassowary come down to the water's edge and stand for some minutes apparently watching the water carefully. It then stepped into the river where it was about three feet deep and, partially squatting down, spread its wings out, submerging them, the feathers being spread and ruffled.

The bird remained motionless and kept its eyes closed as if in sleep. It remained in this position for a quarter of an hour, when, suddenly closing its wings and straightening its feathers, it stepped out on the bank. Here it shook itself several times, whereupon a quantity of small fishes fell out of its wings and from amid its feathers. These the bird immediately picked up and swallowed.

The fishes had evidently mistaken the feathers for a kind of weed that grows in the water along the banks of the river in this island and which much resembles the feathers of the cassowary. The smaller fishes hide in these weeds to avoid the larger ones that prey on them.—Exchange.

THE MOON.

Its Visual Size No Greater When It Is High Than When It Is Low.

The artist has to choose between scientific truth and "convention" when he sets out to paint the moon. A three-penny piece fixed at a distance of six feet from the eye (say at the end of a horizontal six foot pole, the other end of which is made to press the lower edge of the eye socket) will just cover the disk of either the sun or the moon hanging in the sky. It is an absolute fact that this is true whether the moon (or the sun) be high in the sky or low down near the horizon.

The real "visual size" of the moon's disk is no greater when it is low than when it is high. No one who reads what I have just written will believe me. Every one thinks that he knows that the disk of the harvest moon or of the setting sun occupies a larger space in the sky when low than when high. This is due to a judgment or mental process and is an erroneous one. The eye is not at fault, but the curiously untrustworthy mind is.

What, then, is the painter to do? He yields to prejudice and often paints the low moon or low sun of a size which compared with scientific fact is ridiculously exaggerated.—Sir R. Ray Lankester in London Telegraph.

Mer Choles.
They were sisters-in-law and reasonably well disposed toward each other. One was the mother of George, aged six months, and the other was the mother of Marian, aged six months and four days. It was impossible that a slight parental rivalry should be altogether concealed.

"Marian does not seem to grow very fast," said the mother of George, with a suggestion of commiseration in her tones. "George is much taller" (height being measured in inches). "Perhaps he is," replied the mother of Marian coldly, "but Marian weighs more."

"Oh, well," responded the sister-in-law, with a smile of high bred superiority, "of course I should not wish George to be gross."—Exchange.

A Frank Estimate.
To many persons who are not actors the stage seems a delightful and fascinating place. In a book called "The Actress" Louise Closser Hale, herself an actress, tells some of her experiences with girls who envy her profession. One day one of them from behind a counter in a shop said, "I should have went on the stage."

"She evidently wanted to talk," said Miss Hale. "But see how tired I am," I said to her. "I have to work very hard as it is, and I had to work much harder to gain what little recognition I have had."

"Oh, yes," she responded, complacently gazing at herself in a mirror. "But, you see, I have talent."

THE FIRST CHOICE.

It Was Right, Too, Because the S-vast Are the Tenderest.

Some years ago the excursion steamer returning from Alaska to Seattle dislocated its propeller in a dreary portion of the inner passage and came to a forced stop. For two days the vessel's engineers and machinists labored to repair the break, but without success. Two of the boats were manned and dispatched for aid to Victoria, 200 miles away. In the meantime it was discovered that the ship's stores were not abundant. Alarm bred in the minds of pessimistic passengers, and the contagion spread. Starvation might smite the vessel before help arrived.

A former California official took it on himself to reassure his timid companions, but his effort was not perfectly adapted to raise drooping spirits. In fact, his closing sentences, "Let us be brave," added to the gloom. "Let us be brave," he said. "If the worst comes and that dread necessity which in such misadventures has met others must be faced by us, let us remember that it is good to die that our friends may live. The one or more that may be sacrificed will be consoled by that thought."

There was a moment's silence, awful in its intensity, then a cheerful voice was heard. "You should be taken first, Governor Booth. You know the bravest are the tenderest." And even the terror stricken smiled once more.—San Francisco Argonaut.
