IN THE WORLD AT LARGE

Events of Interest and Opinions Expressed by Our Neighbors

Because their agent at Macon Ga. called him a fool, a court reporter has sued the Wabash railroad for $10,000 damages.

Perhaps it is because there is nothing new under the sun that so many young men get familiar under the moon.

One of our exchanges notes that sometimes very small men are big fools.

John D. Rockefeller has recently been notified that a rich Chicago architect claims to own the world. Needless to say he was somewhat shocked.

Can you beat this? To save getting up to build fires on a cold morning a Montana man has patented an attachment to an alarm clock which strikes a bundle of matches and pushes them into a pile of inflammable material under the grate.

"Yes," said Gloomy Gus to Happy Hoedgen. "It's a long time between recesses, but cheer up. Heart is running again."

Taft left his mistlejupe untouched and the Oregonian inquires: "What was the matter with it?"

Of course no one believed that the lion had killed Roosevelt, for we all knew Roosevelt too well.

Fairy earned that medal all right, and the Oregonian believes that any one else can get one on the same terms.

It is reported that the charge made by the Episcopal Bishop of Utah that polygamy in that state is practically supported by the women voters, will not be used as an argument for woman's suffrage.

The Portland Telegram says that Dr. Cook finds this questioned veracity business a splendid advertisement, at any rate.

The Grass Valley Journal reports that Harriman interests have about 3,000 men at work on the Deschutes railroad between Sherar bridge and the mouth of the Deschutes river.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRE

Short Bits of News of Interest From Various Points.

Kansas City, Mo.—Jesse James Jr., son of the famous bandit, and now living in this city, was made the defendant in a divorce suit by his wife, wherein she alleges indignities and declares that James has developed a habit of staying out late at night and refusing to tell her where he has been.

Chicago, Ill.—The Construction News reports that on October building in forty-two large cities, compared with October of last year, ranks Duluth first, with 345 per cent increase;

TRIAL BY RICE.

The Way Suspected Criminals in Bengal Are Treated.

They have peculiar methods of trying suspects in Bengal. One of these is called "trial by rice," says a writer in the Wide World Magazine.

New York—Former Judge Robert S. Lovett has been elected to the committee of law and finance of the Central Illinois railroad, to succeed the late E. H. Harriman.

Washington, D. C.—The interior department approved the Deschutes railroad map of section 2 of its road.

For three-quarters of a mile this right of way conflicts with the right of way of the Oregon Trunk line, where the right of way passes through a narrow defile.

Aside from this there is no conflict between the two rights of way.

OBESITY CURED.

A Remedy That is Not Liable to Attain Wide Popularity.

Peter the Great was once traveling inognito in a part of Finland, when he met a very fat man who told him that he was going to St. Petersburg.

"What for?" asked the czar.

"To consult a doctor about being so fat, which has become very oppressive."

"Do you know any doctor there?"

"No."

"Then I will give you a line to my friend, Prince Menschikov, and he will introduce you to one of the emperor's physicians."

The traveler went to the prince's house with a note. The answer was not delayed. The next day, tied hands and feet, the poor man was dragged off on a cart to the mines.

Two years after Peter the Great was visiting the mines. He had forgotten the incident of the fat man, when suddenly a miner threw down his pick, rushed up to him and fell at his feet crying:

"Grace, grace, what is it I have done?"

Peter looked at him, astonished, until he remembered the story.

"Oh, so that is you," he said. "I hope you are pleased with me. Stand up! How thin and slight you have become! Go, and remember that work is the best cure for your complaint!"

The Amateur.

"Yes," said the person who had attended the party. "Miss Keppendorff was there, and we had to beg and beg her to play."

"And did she play?"

"Oh, yes. I thought for a time that we would have to beg and beg her to stop."—Exchange.

No Fun.

INHERIT THE JOB.

The Postmasters of a Little Town in Kent, England.

Forty years before, as quite a boy, Jones had left a little town in Kent, England. Now, on the first long vacation he ever had since, he was visiting his childhood scenes. He had remembered that the postmaster's name was Pengeley, and he had remembered, too, that he was a kindly old man.

There wasn't the slightest probability, he thought, but his acquaintance with the former incumbent might smooth things a little with the new one, so that the whereabouts of people to whom he had been directed would be made known.

"What's become of Mr. Pengeley?" he asked, interrupting for a moment his majesty's letter assorter.

"I am Mr. Pengeley."

"Perhaps you're his son."

"Yes; my father's name was Pengeley, too," drawled the Englishman.

"I mean the postmaster."

"Do do!"

"Was your father postmaster forty years ago?"

"My word, no! That was my grandfather. You see, our names are all alike, and the postoffice department doesn't know but that the first one is alive. We inherit this job, don't you know. And my wife's just presented me with a son. There was no haggling over his name."—New York Press.

TWO MEN AND A TIP.

An Incident in a Broadway Lunch Room in New York.

A business man who in his university days had been a devoted student of ethics sat down in a lower Broadway lunch room a few days ago and saw something that awakened a particular train of thought in channels unused since his student days.

Directly opposite him two men were finishing their midday meal. One, a spruce dressed chap, sipped his last drop of coffee, placed a dime on the table in front of his empty cup and walked out. The other, equally well dressed, took a little longer time over his coffee before preparing to go.

Then just as he was about to rise he furtively passed his hand over the dime in front of his former neighbor's plate and moved it to a position in front of his own. He then walked hastily out. The waiter a moment later picked up the dime, noting before whose plate it was, and cleaned away the dishes, numbing the while.

Now the former college man is wondering whether this is not a case where he can aptly apply those words of Shakespeare: "Who steals my purse steals trash." . . . but he that slices from me my good name robs me of that which no enriches him and makes me poor indeed."—New York Tribune.

Helping the Town . . .

By banking your money in a bank in your own community you increase the community's power to do business. If substantial business wants to borrow money there is more to loan them. If you bank your money away from home it is loaned to other towns, merchants and manufacturers. Help your home people. Money hidden at home helps no one. Placed in a bank it is put to work to ways that help all.

The First National Bank of Klamath Falls is a good bank to put your money in—safe and reliable.

A Savings Account . . .

In a rainy day fund, a life insurance policy, a sick benefit, a funeral benefit, and an old age pension. There is no substitute closer to the pocket, and it is under the owner's control at all times. It will tide him over sickness; it will care for his family when he must go; it will see him through old age, and bury him when he dies. It is a simple business proposition. Begin early, and keep it up, and like money in the sunset, it will supply him as he journeys.
