"Mid Prins"

People often ask the meaning of the legal expression "mid prins." Literally interpreted, it means "unless before," a name given to the sittings of a court for the trial of civil causes. Judges on circuit, besides trying prisoners, have the power to give decisions in cases of complaints between private parties and when so acting are called judges of "mid prins." Formerly, when the circuits were less frequent, the sheriff was commanded "by writ" to bring the jury and witnesses from the county where the action arose to Westminster, Gloucester or Winchester on a certain day, but when the number became frequent a "mid prins" clause was inserted in the writ containing these words: "Upon before that day my justice shall come to your county and into the shire there." As it happened that the sheriff always did take place before the date named in the writ, the clause was practically useless and now remains only as a name for those civil causes to which until recently it referred.—Dundee Advertiser.

Famous Colors.

The famous colors of Lebanon also grew in India and Algeria, but their home is the Lebanon of northern Syria. In ancient times the sides of the whole mountain were covered with them, but now they are found in only one small hollow on the northwestern slope. There are several fabled in, but in spite of the great care of the growers the 200 that now survive will soon die, and the species will become extinct.

Liberty cannot be established without morality.—Greeley.

The Assessor.

Domestic Girl—Oh, George, what a sweet dream is love! Cynical Sam Driver—My son, and matrimony is the alarm clock.—Illustrated Blix.

Wanted a Wife.

"No, sir, my daughter can never be yours."
 "I don't want her to be my daughter," broke in the young suitor. "I want her to be my wife."

Finger Prints Never Fail.

Although scars from wounds and ulcers frequently partly destroy the pattern folds, such disfigurements are more often than otherwise aids to identification. When the system of finger prints was first introduced at police headquarters in New York a lieutenant in one of the administrative departments tried to discredit it. He had an experimental print made of the tip of a finger and a short time afterward asked to have the same finger reprinted. He had meantime ground down the skin of this finger on a grindstone until the blood almost flowed. Nevertheless the pattern form was more accurately disclosed in the second printing than in the first. Once the record has been made nothing has yet been discovered to invalidate it.—Charles Brewer in Century.

Revised Upward.

One evening at family prayers the head of the house read that chapter which concludes with, "And the wife saw that she reverence her husband." After the exercises had closed and the children had gone to bed, the New York Post says, he quoted it, looking meaningly at his wife.
 "Let us see what the Revised Version says on that subject," said she. "I will follow the new teaching, if you please."
 The Revised Version was produced, and her change may be imagined as the head impressively read, "And let the wife see that she fear her husband."

She Meant Professionally.

As the young man examined the check of his lady she drew away hastily. "I think," she said indignantly, "you had better see father first."
 "Why, what do you mean?" asked the perplexed lover.
 "Father," she replied as she turned her check, "is a barber."—Success Magazine.

Helped Them Along.

"Have you given proper attention to your children's teeth?" asked the health department circular.
 "I've always provided plenty of good food for 'em to chew on," the fond parent inscribed on the bottom of the paper and mailed it back.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Athena Saved by Poetry.
 When B. C. 404, after a heroic struggle, Athens, the "City of the Violet Crown," was captured by Lyander there were not wanting clamorous voices to urge that the city whose just for empire had brought such woes on Greece ought to be laid level with the ground.

The Spartan general at first lent a willing ear to his powerful allies, but while the council was still debating this momentous issue a plaintive voice was heard from the city walls chanting those noble lines from the "Electra" of Euripides, that most human of the poets of Greece, in which the heroine contrasts her fallen lot with the splendid exploits of her father, who had dismantled the towers of Troy.

Lyander bent his head and pondered on fortune's cruel reverses. Triumphant as Agamemnon, who could tell but that he might be reserved for a fate as cruel? The lesson of moderation was accepted. Athens was saved. Milton has immortalized this dramatic event in one of his best known sonnets:

The repeated air
 Of sad Electra's post had the power
 To save the Athenian walls from ruin.

Comets and Great Men.

It is somewhat remarkable how often the death of an eminent person has been marked by the appearance of a comet. A certain writer, indeed, after going through a list of comets for 600 years, says that it is "as if God and nature intended by comets to ring the knell of princes, esteeming bells in churches upon earth not sacred enough for such illustrious and eminent performances." To mention only a few, Charolus the Younger, Louis II, Charles the Bald, Theophilus, bishop of Tours; Henry II, and Richard I had their knells thus rung by comets. Even in Shakespeare's time the comet was considered a fitting accompaniment to the obsequies of kings: Hung be the heavens with black, you day to night; Comets, importing change of times and states; Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky; And with them scourge the bad revolting stars That have consented unto Henry's death.—London Outlook.

Thoughtless Clerks.

Every business has a good will and every satisfied customer is a feather in that cap. Trained men at big salaries are employed to keep tight in place the feathers that are already there and to add new feathers. It is the advertising department that is most conspicuously engaged in the feathering process, while the adjusting department is most characteristically employed in keeping the plume firm-anchored. Both of these departments are maintained at a large proportionate expense, which goes to show the value of feathers. Who, then, in the organization of a business could be mischievous enough to pluck the feathers from the good will cap? Who, indeed? Yet all day long here and there throughout some stores peck, peck, so ruthless beaks, impelled by raven brains in the heads of various clerks.—Bookkeeper.

Painful.

A little story comes from way back concerning Forrest, the tragedian. It was during his last appearance at Niblo's garden, in New York. At the time he was suffering untold torture from the gout. A sort of torture had to be constructed from the stage to the dressing room, for he was quite unable to step up or down stairs. The performance had been "Caroline" and Forrest was panting from pain and tired with his work. He stumbled against the runway, causing such a swing in his toe as to make him fall out with the pain. A young actor standing by unfortunately addressed the tragedian at the wrong time, saying: "Dear me, Mr. Forrest, that must have been exceedingly painful."
 "Not half so painful as your acting," was the crusty response.

"Never Too Late to Mend."
 Most of us associate the phrase "It's never too late to mend" with Charles Reade's famous novel, and very likely some of us think he invented it. But it is really one of the most ancient gems of popular philosophy. A correspondent of London Notes and Queries has discovered it in a petition from the community to the mayor and aldermen of the city in 1623. It must have been of a respectable age even then, seeing that it is quoted as one of the "proverbs" of the period.

A Failure.

"There isn't enough analogy in the English language," proclaimed the bright young student. "If we say 'male and female' to distinguish sex, why not say 'lion and feline' too?"
 "Wouldn't distinguish," replied the practical professor, "considering both are felines."—Baltimore American.

Her Very Picture.

He (tragedically)—I adore everything that is grand, exquisite, super-sublime. I love the peerless, the serene, the perfect in life. She (blushing coyly)—Oh, George, how can I refuse you when you put it so beautifully?

Our Neighbor.

What is meant by our neighbor we cannot doubt. It is every one with whom we are brought into contact, whenever it be, when we have any means of helping.—Dean Stanley.

Newcomb's Definition of "Magnet."

Personally Newcomb was an agreeable companion and a faithful friend. His success was due largely to his tenacity of purpose. The writer's only personal contact with him came through the Standard Dictionary, of whose definitions in physical science Newcomb had general oversight. On one occasion he came into the office greatly disatisfied with the definition that we had framed for the word "magnet"—a conception almost impossible to define in any logical way. We had simply enumerated the properties of the thing, a course which in the absence of authoritative knowledge of their causes was the only rational procedure. But Newcomb's mind demanded a logical treatment, and, though he must have seen from the outset that this was a forlorn hope, his tenacity of purpose kept him pencil in hand, writing and erasing alternately for an hour or more. Finally he confessed that he could do no better than the following pair of definitions: "Magnet, a body capable of exerting magnetic force," and "magnetic force, the force exerted by a magnet." With a hearty laugh at his beautiful circuitus in definiendo he threw down his pencil, and the imperfect and illogical office definition was accepted.—North American Review.

Old Time Quackery.

The eighteenth century was the golden harvest time of the quack, against whom some of the bitter shafts of Hogarth's satire were directed. The quack loved to surround himself with an atmosphere of mystery, which was calculated to impress upon the credulity of his victims. His room was decked with skulls and skeletons. A brisk trade in quackery was carried on by women. J. C. Wright in his book, "The Good Old Times," records the fact that in the year 1780 a Mrs. Joanna Stephens was awarded £5,000 by the English government for a proper discovery made by her for the cure of the stone. This "proper discovery," adds Mr. Wright, "consisted of a powder, a decoction and pills, the last named being formed from calcined snails, with carrot seeds, hips and haws, the compound being burnt to blackness and then mixed with soap and honey."

A Ludicrous Experiment.

Holmes was one of the many eminent men who have attempted to solve the riddle of the universe. In his case the result was ludicrous. From the sublime thoughts that came to him while under the influence of chloroform he thought he might arrive at some solution. Placing himself in his armchair, with pen, ink and paper at hand, he inhaled the anaesthetic. As drowsiness stole over him the nature of things seemed revealed. By a vigorous effort he seized his pen and wrote—he knew not what, for before he had finished he fell back unconscious. When he recovered he turned with trembling anxiety to the sheet of paper, on which, written in scrawling characters, but quite legible, he found the awful revelation. "A strong smell of turpentine pervades the whole!"—London News.

An Accommodating Boy.

A Newark woman who lives in an apartment house changed her iceman not long ago, and the next day the youth who drove the team for the new man put the piece of ice on the dumb waiter in the basement to be hoisted up. She pulled away.
 "Heavens," she exclaimed, "that new iceman certainly gives good weight!"

After much effort she got the dumb waiter up to the kitchen level. To her amazement, there was a small boy sitting upon the ice. With what little breath she had left she demanded:
 "What in the world did you make me pull you up here for?"
 "Why," replied the youngster, "I thought maybe the cake would be too heavy for you to lift, so I came up to help you off with it."—Lippincott's.

Navigators' Date Line.

The international date line is an irregular line drawn arbitrarily on the map of the Pacific ocean near the one hundred and eightieth meridian of longitude, marking the place where navigators change their date on the trans-pacific voyage. This change is necessary on account of the lengthening of one hour for every fifteen degrees of travel westward. By traveling eastward a day will be gained, westward a day will be lost.—New York American.

He Went Up.

"Is Mike Clancy here?" asked the visitor at the quarry just after the premature explosion.
 "No, sir," replied Patrick; "he's gone."
 "For good?"
 "Well, sir, he went in that direction."—New York Journal.

The Sensitive Press Humorist.

"It makes a poor humorist and when he sees one of his jokes attributed to some one else."
 "I judge so."
 "And it doesn't seem to please him any better to see one of his rival's jokes attributed to him."—Kansas City Journal.

His Awful Mistake.

Mr. Norrich—I understand the objective is to play one of Darwin's comparisons tonight. Mrs. O'Rourke—Doon't? Doon't? Ah, I suppose you mean Handel!—Chicago News.
