AN EARTHLY INFERNO.

Volcanizing Factory Where Men Stand 215 Degrees.

The hottest place in New York is in Deane street in a volcanizing factory, where telephone wires are insulated by being coated with a preparation of rubber. In the room where this process takes place the temperature rises to 215 degrees, 100 degrees hotter than the hottest it may be outside in the sun. Men can endure no more. Actually there are some who can stand this, however—only a few, mind you, but still some. They are only the strongest and hardiest of workmen, and they can be in the room but a few brief minutes at a time. Several times daily it is their duty to enter the room to see that all goes well.

To keep from losing their skin and to protect themselves from the terrible heat these men wear heavy woolen shirts buttoned high above their necks and woolen masks and gloves. Four or five minutes at the most in the volcanizing room is all they can stand without collapsing, and some can't even stay that long. Outside these men nobody is ever allowed to endure such a frightful heat. In fact, it is hard to convey the idea of 215 degrees. You can get the same degree of temperature by thrusting your finger into boiling water. Water boils at 212 degrees F.—New York World.

HE LOVED HER.

The Depth of His Feeling Was Revealed in His Answer.

"Do you love me?" he asked.

In reply the modern young girl looked at the modern young man with eyes full of love and emotion.

"Do I love you?" she repeated. "I do. I love you passionately, ardently, eternally. From the psychological standpoint I feel that our different organisms are so nicely dovetailed as to form a properly articulated area of combined consciousness. Sociologically our individual environment has been enough in contrast to form a proper basis for a right union. Economically I feel sure that when we come to combine we shall be able to introduce into the management of our affairs the right financial balance to produce the scientific result which every well ordered and conducted business produces. And, now, how do you love me?"

The young man reacted forward. He clasped her swiftly, but gently, in his arms. He hugged her long and plety. He kissed her sinisther cheek and her ruby lips.

"How do I love you?" he replied. "My dear girl, I love you just as much as if you really knew what you were talking about."—Life.

Study Under Difficulties.

It was my love for my children that gave me the energy, the will power, to reach great heights in my profession. I practiced, I studied my great rules and arithmetical at the piano, the baby at my breast, the others playing around me none too softly. I remembered my parts while standing at the oil stove cooking our simple meal or while busy at the washbasin, with my little ones always around me. Singing, learning, studying, I was supremely happy because they were with me. I brought up my children, and they were my comfort and my support. They made a brave, courageous "follow" of me. And it was no difficult task. If I had to hurry to the theater for rehearsals I would give the children their supper at 5 o'clock and put them to bed. When I returned at 10 or 11 o'clock I would be greeted by merry birds twittering from the different little nests, and I would divide my sandwiches with them. Then we would sleep as only the happy and healthy may.—Mrs. Schumann-Holst in Dellator.

Collier and a Collier.

A single unprinted letter may produce astonishing results, and even the misreading of a capital letter as a small one may be disastrous. When John Payne Collier died the London Press correctly gave a paragraph stating that he had been buried in Gray churchyard, near Maidenhead, a large number of friends being present at the funeral. But a provincial paper which presumably knew nothing of the notable Shakespearean critic gave the same paragraph concerning "John Payne, a collier," and to complete the thing headed it "The Gray Colliery Disaster."—London Chronicle.

Practical Superstition.

"Are you superstitious?" "Is a practical way." "How is that?" "Well, I never walk under a ladder unless I feel sure it won't fall on me, and I always expect bad luck when pursued by a mad bull across a lot in which there are just thirteen acres."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Survival of Pittol.

Miss Helene Mathers thinks that the decline of the novel is due to a large extent to motorcars. There is no doubt that a large class of readers have been almost entirely eliminated by these vehicles. We refer to those persons who used to read as they walked along the roadway.—London Punch.

Envy.

Madge (grudgingly)—Did you see that handsome man I just danced with? Kate—Yes; he has a jealous wife, who will allow him to dance only with the plainest girl in the room.—Boston Transcript.

Many a young man starts in to work with a noble ambition. Then the ambitious overprizes, and he gets fired.—Chicago News.

MEN AND WOMEN

George Barnum, who is now playing Baron Corcoran in the New York theatrical success, "Such a Little Queen," was at one time a prominent figure in Pacific Coast baseball affairs and a favorable candidate for the presidency of the National league some years ago.

Wm. A. Brady, the big theatrical manager and producer, husband of the charming and versatile little actress, Grace George, has offered James J. Jeffries $10,000 if he will fight Al Kaufman, and is willing to bet $1,000 that Kaufman will win in a ten-round fight. If the former champion refuses this offer he is willing to bet $10,000 that Jack Johnson will win in their coming fight by the knockout route. Brady at one time was manager for Jeffries.

Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth is planning to ride in the Wright aeroplane with Captain Forbes, the government aeronaut in the coming army tests at Fort Meyer.

Rudyard Kipling has, of course, done more to familiarize the world with India than anyone else. Here is an incident which Mr. Kipling tells as an actual event, which has somehow escaped finding its way into any of his books. A few years ago the native station master of an Indian railway station many miles from the haunts of Swami Tumbo, was attacked by a tiger made bold by hunger. His assistant instantly took refuge in the office, barricaded the doors and wired for instructions to the nearest town. Imagine the amazement of the operator at the other end of the line to receive the following dispatch: "Tiger on platform eating station master. Please wire instructions."—Portland Journal.

NEWEST NOTES OF SCIENCE

An American owner of a pig ranch on the site of the volcano of Kilauea, on the island of Hawaii, makes use of the crater's heat to cook for his stock vegetable food raised on his property.

Experts in the department of Agriculture have succeeded in raising in this country a species of water melon indigenous to Roumania. The fruit is the size of a grape fruit, with a thin skin.

Tests by French scientists seem to show that it is a sixth sense that enables bees to return to their hives from as far away as two miles, the insects depending upon neither sight nor smell.

Archaeologists are excavating at the site of the ancient Etruscan city of Adria, which gave the Adriatic sea its name. Abandoned when the sea receded, the city was buried by river alluvium.

To myriads of a species of sea wood are attributed the loss of 100,000 hysters from French beds. The wood apparently attached itself to them, then floated away, carrying the shells with it.

A German inventor claims to have perfected a non-inflammable celluloid by using acetyl-cellulose, made from acetic acid, instead of nitro-cellulose, and artificial camphor instead of the genuine.

A Non-Combatant

"Why don't you play bridge whist?"

"Because I want to be popular. If you play badly you lose and people wish you were out of the game. And if you play well you win and people wish you were out of the game just the same."—Washington Star.

She Followed Instructions, Not—

The young Nova Scotia girl confided to her mistress, after a few days, some of the trials of her journey from her old home. "Twas an awful time I had on the boat, ma'am. 'Twas that made me so pale-looking when first you saw me."

"You were very seashy, I suppose?" said the lady.

"Oh, no, ma'am, I was not seashy at all," said pretty Lida; "but I lost my sleep. I read the card about how to put on the life-preserver, and I thought I understood it; but most likely I got something wrong, for when once I got it on me I couldn't find an easy way to lie down. 'Twas so clumsy. And I never slept a wink all night, ma'am"—Youth's Companion.
