LOVE FOR TITLES.

The Way the Average German Burger Longthens His Name.
The average German burger's love of titles is a source of never ending fun to the rest of the German population and of continual ridicule to the rest of the world. Any one caring to see how far some people of the fatherland will go in this direction need only have a look at a hotel register at a summer resort. He will see added to the name of the guest the most curious combinations of appellations drawn together to form a title. He will, for instance, find:
A "Technischen Provinzialfeuerwehrschutzinspektor" or technical provincial fire insurance inspector.
A "Gebirgs Expeditionen Sekretar im Ministerium der Oeffentlichen Arbeiten" (meaning a special sort of secretary at the ministry of public works).
A—to continue in English as well as possible—"cashier president of the Royal Saxon railway," a "royal railroad subsecretary."
The ladies are not better. "Frau Verwitwetersteuerrathin" is quite usual and means "Mrs. Widowed Superior Collector." Then there are the "Mrs. Secretary and Calculator" and "Mrs. Widowed General Agent." The best of all, however, is a title which a lady entered in the register of a hotel at which I recently stayed. It read, "Mrs. Prison Warden and Children."—Fall Mail Gazette.

TAMING A BIRD.

Teaching a Feathered Pet to Trust You is Not Difficult.
No creature is more jealous or sensitive than a bird. It is easy, however, to win the heart of almost any bird, and that without starving him or making him think he has mastered you. Simply talk to him a good deal.
Place his cage near you on your desk or work table, and retain his choicest dainties to give to him with your own fingers. Let him know that he can never have that particular thing unless he takes it from you, and he will soon learn, if you are patient and do not disconcert him by fixing your eyes upon him.
After this he will more readily take it from your lips, and then when you let him out of his cage, after the first excitement is over, he will come to you, especially if you have a call to which you have accustomed him, and accept the dainties you wish to give.
As soon as he becomes really convinced that you will not hurt him or try to catch him or interfere in any way with his liberty he will give way to his boundless curiosity about you. He will pull your hair, pick at your eyes and give you as much of his company as you desire.—New York Times.

A Last Opportunity.

The father of the late French Constant Coquelin, the great French actor, was a baker, and young Coquelin was brought up to the trade. At thirteen, a writer in La Figaro says, he manifested an irresistible inclination toward the stage, an inclination which his father steadfastly strove to repress.
"Don't devote so much time to those dramas," his father used to say. "You have learned a good trade, the business is running well, and you shall be my successor."
A number of years after Constant had made his way into general favor his father, who took pride in his boy's success, but could never quite get over the feeling that Constant should have been a baker, was congratulated upon his son's eminence.
"I remember," said the old man, "that Constant was a good baker. He would have gone far in the trade."

Blowing Up the Lock.

Would it be easy to blow up and destroy a lock canal by the malicious use of dynamite or other high explosive? The question has been debated much in connection with the Panama canal. The Engineering News calls attention to the fact that an attempt made in 1900 to wreck the Welland canal in this way produced surprisingly small results. After two weeks' examination the two men concerned selected lock 24, and each lowered a satchel containing dynamite and a fuse to the water behind the gate at each end of the lock. Both charges were exploded, but the dynamite failed to carry away the gates. Although the explosion blew a hole about a foot in diameter through each gate and loosened the hinges, the gates remained in position, holding back the water.

in the Regular Establishment.

"Yes," said the fresh young lieutenant, "the army has fallen on evil days."
The sophisticated captain merely gasped.
"Why," the F. Y. L. went on, "look at the names on this roll—Private Hertz, Corporal Panishment, Major Domo, General Housework. What kind of a—"
But just then the R. G. sited a—a—well, a ginger ale bottle at the fleeing offender.—Lippincott's.

Evidently a Connoisseur.

"Suggins is a connoisseur in cigars."
"He must be. Otherwise he might make an occasional mistake and give away a good one."—Washington Star.

Which Leg?

In a small town in the west of Scotland the town clerk, who was a bit of a "character," had the misfortune to lose his leg in a railway accident. As a mark of appreciation and esteem for his long services the council unanimously agreed to replace his loss with an artificial limb, which they did as soon as he was sufficiently recovered. A few months afterward the town clerk, who was generally known by his Christian name, Paul, was unfortunately in an accident. Naturally the mishap became food for town gossip, and one old wife in discussing the matter with a neighbor was overheard saying:
"It's a gay bad business for Paul, poor man, but let's his ain leg or the leg that belongs to the 'toon that's broken!"

Take as Directed.

HOW A HORSE GALLOPS.

The Natural Way and the Conventional Pose in Art.

How does a horse gallop? Owing to the rapidity of action it cannot be seen by the human eye. However, just as the individual spokes of a rapidly revolving wheel can be made visible by a flash of lightning, so the action of a galloping horse can be and has been analyzed by instantaneous photography.

The statuette of Sycoby, the thoroughbred, has been made from photographs taken at the instant when all four legs are off the ground. The back is arched, the hind feet are directed forward, the fore feet backward, so that all are tucked under the animal's body.

When the limbs again touch the ground the first to do so is one of the hind feet, which is thrust far forward so as to form an acute angle with the line of the body and thus serve the purpose of a spring in breaking the force of the impact of the hoof when the horse is going at top speed.

In the conventional mode of representing a galloping horse all four legs are off the ground at once, but the front pair are extended backward in such a way that the undersurfaces of their hoofs are directed skyward, the body being at the same time brought near the ground. This conventional pose appears to have been derived from a dog running, when the front and hind pairs of legs are respectively extended forward and backward, with the sole of the hind foot turned upward.

This pose, it is thought, was adopted to represent the gallop of the horse by the goldenmiths of Mycenaee between 200 and 1000 B. C., whence it was transmitted by way of Persia and Siberia to China and Japan, to return in the eighteenth century as the result of commercial relations to western Europe.—Chicago Tribune.

The Serwig.

There is no insect which has puzzled naturalists as to its proper classification more than the serwig. Some have asserted that it belongs to the beetles, of which it is an "aberrant type," others that it is connected with the grasshoppers. Even about its very name there has been endless discussion. Some have thought the name serwig is the result of the creature's supposed habit of getting into the ears, while others are equally certain that it is derived from the original name, which they say was sarwig, from the fact that the wing when spread resembles the human ear. At all events, one thing is certain—the serwig as we know it now is a survival of an early type of which almost every other member has become extinct.

Appropriate.

A family of children, after the usual Saturday night roasts, gathered in the drawing room for music and singing. As bedtime drew near the mother said:
"Now, children, choose one hymn to finish up with, and then you must all say 'Good night.'"
"Let's have 'Ye Again Our Sabbath Close,'" suggested a bright little girl of about seven years of age.
"Well, I think that would be more suitable tomorrow evening," replied the mother.

Brazen For Dish.

There is a latent truth in the primitive Maori belief that by eating the brains of his enemies a warrior acquired their skill and cunning.
It was a custom among these savages, whose descendants I have seen and admired in Hawaii and New Zealand, to hold a brain feast after a successful battle. The conquering chief always reserved for his own portion the gray matter of the opposing leader. Observe how the practice works out in modern life. We do not actually eat our rivals' brains, but if we are wise we will try to absorb what those brains contain. The man who makes a big success in the man who makes the best use of his enemies' studies their mores, learns their methods, knows what thought processes they are apt to follow. Down here in the street I guess we're more or less akin to the Maori, anyway.—New York Herald.
