ANOTHER MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE

Two Restaurant Men in One Week Drop From Sight.

Two men, both interested in the restaurant business in this city, have recently disappeared under the most curious circumstances.

George Compton of the Davenport cafe about a week ago told the men who were working for him that he intended cutting down his help, and so paid them all up to date and, as was supposed, he expected to do the waiting himself. That night was the last that has been seen of him. He left his watch, clothes and practically everything he owned in his room, and took along only his gun and wore an old pair of boots. Since then, though there have been several out searching for him, no trace of the missing young man has been found.

A cook by the name of Welch came down from Odessa Thursday with $150 in cash in his pocket and announced that he would open a restaurant, and prepared to lease the store now occupied by the Gun Store. He bought a range, and that was the last seen of him. His wife and little child are in the city now and the police are aiding the deserted woman in searching for the man.

There has been a good deal of speculation concerning both of these cases, but as yet no cause that would give a real reason for the sudden disappearance of either of the men has been reached.

ANNIVERSARY OF WHITMAN MASSACRE

Yesterday was the sixty-second anniversary of the Whitman massacre—a calamity that befell the Oregon country November 29, 1847, when Dr. Marcus Whitman and wife and twelve others were massacred at Wallilltipu (Whitman's mission) by the Cayuse Indians.

Yesterday forenoon Cyrus H. Walker of Albany, Ore., who was born at Whitman's mission December 7, 1838, gave a talk in the assembly room to the teachers and pupils of the Klamath Falls public school that was listened to with marked interest. He told how the first Indian missions came to be established, related the events leading up to the massacre, the breaking up of the missions and the removal to the Willamette valley of his father's family and that of Rev. C. Eells and family; both families then stationed at the Spokane mission thirty-five miles northwest of Spokane at what is now known as Walker's Prairie.

He also contrasted schoolboy days in Oregon, with school taught in a rough log schoolhouse and rude appliances, as compared with up-to-date buildings and furnishings. He told the pupils to stick to their studies, at least passing the high school grades, and taking a college course if possible; and to have some definite purpose in life.

Mr. Walker said he foolishly left school as he was about to take the four years' college course—an action that had been a matter of regret during all his after life.

To illustrate the Chinook jargon.

he sang a song in that language. His last words were that he served in the war that ended slavery; was now a soldier in the war to liberate Oregon and America from the liquor power, and hoped God would spare his life to witness the last triumphant battle.

DENIES GRAFT AT KLAMATH

settlers shall repay into the reclamation fund the exact cost of construction, and it is not given to him or to any other official to waive this requirement. Even if assurance has been given that the project would cost only $18 an acre, that assurance would not hold if, in the end, it turned out that the cost was greater than that amount.

When the Klamath project is completed and its exact cost determined, the total will be divided by the number of acres to which water is supplied, and the solution of this simple arithmetical problem will determine to a cent how much each settler must pay back to the reclamation fund. That is the rule on all projects; it is the law, and the Secretary says the law will be enforced just as rigidly at Klamath as elsewhere.

Chief Engineer Deakes. As to the various charges of sorption and maladministration, Secretary Ballinger stated that those charges could best be answered by A. P. Davis, chief engineer of the reclamation service. Mr. Davis was with the senate committee at Klamath. He heard the charges made, and he heard what the Chicago correspondent apparently failed to hear—the refutation of each and every accusation. Secretary Ballinger instructed Mr. Davis to prepare an answer to the charges, read over that answer after it was prepared, and in authorizing its publication, said: "There are the facts; facts are ample answer to any and all charges."

(The statement by Chief Engineer Davis will be printed in full in tomorrow's Herald.)

Bamboo Shoots as Food. The bamboo shoots that are eaten are not yet branched, of a conical form and sheathed in an envelope generally covered by small, prickly bristles. These young shoots emerge very vigorously from the soil at the foot of the bamboo tufts. The Chinese and Japanese, it appears, consume large quantities of them. They use them as seasoning with pork and chicken. The first thing in their preparation naturally is to rid the sprouts of their disagreeable sheath. They are then cut either lengthwise or in slices and are placed in boiling water. The water is renewed once or twice, and after adding salt a vegetable is obtained which reminds one strongly of the root of the artichoke. The Japanese also eat them preserved in brine or vinegar. The gathering of the young bamboo shoots, during which one must be careful of the prickly envelope, takes place in June and November in Tonkin. The November shoots are the better appreciated.—New York Herald's Paris Edition.

Boomerang Kinks. There are a good many "kinks" to be learned to throw the boomerang skillfully. One is always to throw against the wind if you want it to come back to you. It is a miniature aeroplane, for it literally sails against the wind and is borne upward and onward by the breeze. If the player wants to make a long distance straightaway record he can throw with the wind, but he must take care to select a boomerang which is heavy—so heavy that it will not be too much affected by the air currents. By pointing the boomerang at a certain angle he can make it soar aloft in circles like a hawk until it may be as high as 100 feet above the earth. As in golf playing, it is not so much mere strength that makes a long thrower, but the skill in aiming, the direction and in boomerang throwing the way in which advantage may be taken of the air currents.—St. Nicholas.

Sweet Revenge. "It must be due to be under contract to write exclusively for a big magazine." "And to have all the other magazines clamoring for your work, eh?" "Just so. Think of the satisfaction of sending 'em a printed refusal slip."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

INTEREST IS INCREASING

meetings at hand. Before this town is the union of the bay and the ocean, behind it the green depths of a pine forest. Between the rocky points below are little sheltered inlets with tiny individual beaches—good bathing in rainbow waters—real basking places, with the sleepy song of the sea siren-like wooing the mind away from all cares. Here is a fascinating community of Chinese fishers in their rambling, scrambling village on the rocks, with sea-grey driftwood houses along their twisting lanes and great brown nets spread out like drying seaweed. Here in the mingled breath of sea and forest, the party will stop a short time and take the wonderful seventeen-mile drive.

The Seventeen-Mile Drive. Deep in the pines at Pacific Grove is one end of the Seventeen-Mile Drive, the one thing that more than any other spells Monterey in the memory of the visitor who has had the experience. For there are few such drives in the world. It is perfectly macadamized for its entire length and there is only enough grade to add occasionally the charm of suspense to the royal views that expand as one ascends gently to the succeeding promontories. Leading out of the solemn shadows of the pines the road runs down to Point Pinos, where an old lighthouse sends its faithful warning across the water. Each ensues upon beach, all different, soft with rich yellow sand or brilliant with polished pebbles, or thick with a heavy olive-brown moss, but all sloping gently into that wonderful water whose color is beyond word-painting, or any painting for that matter. Out of this glorious sea with its peacock blues and greens, its purple and its crests of snowy foam, lift the dove-colored cliffs that furnish a soft note in this crash of color; in their seams cling a plant covered with rose-pink blossoms.

Century Old Cypressess. Above them, strange, mysterious, as though under the spell of a thousand years' enchantment, stand the Monterey cypresses, numbered among the marvels of the world. They are gnarled and bent and bent and twisted into fantastic, even tortured shapes, testifying perhaps, of some unrecorded yesterdays in the youth of the world when the sea breeze, not kindly as today, wrestled with these trees, and lost. Above their pale-grey trunks they lift crests as deeply green as canyon moss, with stems as red as iron rust flashing through the green. Nowhere else in America are these trees found, but they are among the glories of Japan, and the Hebrew poets knew them as the cedars of Lebanon.

Drive to Be Taken by Moonlight. Through groves of these bewitched trees the seventeen-mile drive leads on, now turning at just the right angle to put some magnificent specimens of these wonder trees in silhouette against the shining sea, now plunging into the forest until the surf is a faint murmur in the distance, then swiftly seeking again the rainbow cliffs and surges. Think of such a place by moonlight, for the drive will be taken by the Booster Girls in the late evening. The colors are gone, but their ghosts wander everywhere under the moon. There are deer in these woods and curious cattle, half buffalo, are grazing in the pastures near the ocean. Truly, a wonderful place, unsurpassed for beauty.

The balance of the stops will be published in a near issue. Following is the standing of the candidates: The next count will be made Wednesday evening and the result announced in the next issue of The Herald:

Helping the Town . . .

By banking your money in a bank in your own community you increase the community's power to do business. If substantial farmers want to borrow money there is more to loan them. If you bank your money away from home it is loaned to other farmers, merchants and manufacturers. Help your home people. Money hidden at home helps no one. Placed in a bank it is put to work in ways that help all.

A Savings Account . . .

Is a rainy day fund, a life insurance policy, a sick benefit, a funeral benefit, and an old age pension. There is no forfeiture clause in the passbook, and it is under the owner's control at all times. It will tide him over sickness; it will care for his family when he must go; it will see him through old age, and bury him when he dies. It is a simple business proposition. Begin early, and keep it up, and, like manna in the desert, it will supply him as he journeys.
