THE JACKSON COUNTY ROAD

IT IS well that Jackson county should awaken to the realization of the advantage to be derived by her men of business having a good road made over the Cascades to this county. Time was when almost every farmer and ranchman in this county was compelled to either go or send to that county for his fruit and vegetable supplies. But that time has gone by, for two reasons: First, because many Klamath county people have begun to raise their own fruits and vegetables; and, second, the railroad has come, and, in some measure, has brought relief from the former condition.

But Klamath has scenic and other advantages which are attractive t Jackson county people, and the rout itself is something attractive to th traveler; its long mountain climb its grand gorges, its great wealth tall timber, its crystal, purlit streams of water, its beautiful lan scapes, its dismal solitudes, its t ering cliffs and dizzy pinacles of r and cliff—all these combine to ma the trip over the Cascades a deli to everyone who loves Nature in wildest state. Klamath county h heretofore spent much money for t building and improvement of th mountain road in the years agon and will without doubt meet the forts of Jackson county people wi a liberal spirit.

CURRENCY TANGLE NOW UNRAVELE

CHINA HAS AGREED TO INSTA A MONETARY SYSTEM OF A MORE MODERN METHOD—FOR-EIGNERS MUCH RELIEVED

United Press Service

WASHINGTON, May 1.—With the recent signatures of the contract for the loan of $50,000,000 to China by American, British, German and French bankers, the death knell of the most hopelessly confused currency in the world was sounded. Foreigners residing in or doing business with China breathed a great sigh of relief, as the loan is to end a most vexatious obstacle to the transaction of business.

China agrees as a part of the contract to install a currency system worthy of the name. Until the eighties of the last century, China had no silver coinage. The copper, or, more properly, the brass cash, was the only national coin. Silver was used in the lump, by weight, the unit of weight known to foreigners as the tael (an Indian term), and to the Chinese as the liang, the equal, roughly speaking, to 1 1-3 ounces, avoirdupois.

The weight of the liang, however, and the fineness of the silver bullion, varied in every city of the empire, and to add to the confusion, Mexican and Spanish dollars were also in use in certain localities. About 1887 the Chinese provincial government began to mint dollar pieces, and there are some eight or ten varieties of these in circulation, all nominally of the value of a Mexican dollar, but in reality entirely lacking uniformity.

Added to these various dollars is that of the British crown colony, Hongkong, which is in use in a number of the ports. Several foreign banks doing business in China have issued paper notes, which have a limited circulation. Some of these are subject to discount if used outside the port of issue. All this has produced great confusion, and burdened trade with endless charges of exchange, and the difficulties have been increased by the fluctuation in the gold value of the silver.

The American government has been consulted a number of times by China during recent years in regard to currency reform which would relieve the situation. In 1903 a treaty was signed in which China agreed to provide a uniform national coinage.

In 1904, at the request of China, Prof. J. W. Jenks of Cornell University, and a member of the commission on international exchange, was sent to Pekin by the American government. Prof Jenks studied the monetary situation in China for eighteen months, and his recommendations were accepted.

However, after his return to the United States a change of sentiment appeared. Various substitute schemes were presented, but none adopted until last May, when an imperial edict appeared approving a plan.

The standard coin is to be of silver of the same weight and fineness as the Mexican dollar. The fractional pieces in silver will be the dime, the quarter and the half dollars, and subsidiary coins in addition to these will be a nickel five cent piece, and in copper the mill, five mills, one cent and two cent pieces.

Job Awaits Benson, Jr.

Another change in the secretary of State's office, says the Oregonian, will come June 1, when C. A. Zeigler will be asked to resign. Zeigler holds one of the more important of the clerical positions and his place has been tendered to Wallace Benson, son of the late Governor and Secretary of State.

Wallace Benson is attending the University of Oregon and the position will be offered him upon his leaving school this year. He is a resident of Roseburg.

Secretary Olcott, in speaking of the prospective appointment, paid another high tribute to the late Secretary of State, whom Olcott succeeded.
