JUST LIKE THIS

Since the election returns have been made known one member of Mayor Sanderson's family seems to be dissatisfied, for today he was seen walking down the S. P. tracks in the direction of Weed and Sunny California. The deserting members of the mayor's family is "Jack," the golden cocker spaniel, who was at one time the pride of the executive's heart, but who later became so popular all through town that he seemed to forget about his master, and only dropped around once in a great while to pay the family a friendly visit. At one time Jack was as pretty a dog as one would like to look upon, and he was particularly obedient. He readily made friends, who were always ready to feed him bits, and as time wore on he soon had established for himself a "handout route" that would make a professional bum take notice, while he had sleeping quarters in every part of the city. Yesterday Mayor Sanderson noticed Jack making himself popular with the denizens of the hobo camp near the Hot Springs, and this afternoon he was not greatly surprised to see the canine meandering down the track with a number of boxer tourists. Jack seemed to have no compunction at all about leaving the town of his birth, and the mayor did not think it worth while to bid the dog farewell.

Mayor E. E. Fitch of Merrill is a guest at the Lakeside Inn.
