GEN. WOOD SAYS IT CAN BE DONE

COMMANDER OF OUR MILITARY FORCES GIVES OUT HIS PLAN FOR RAISING A SUFFICIENT FORCE IN EMERGENCY

Special to The Herald WASHINGTON, May 8.—How the United States could have 500,000 men ready for an emergency call to arms in case of need was outlined here today in a statement to the United Press by Lieutenant General Leonard Wood, chief of staff, U. S. A.

General Wood broached for the first time details of his plan in discussing the mobilization at San Antonio, and the criticisms thereof made in various quarters.

(By Lieutenant General Leonard Wood, Chief of Staff, U. S. A.) (Copyright, 1911, by the United Press Association)

The mobilization at San Antonio shows that the regular troops of the United States army are ready to leave their garrisons equipped for the field at the shortest notice.

In the San Antonio mobilization the brigade and division organization and their staffs were working together for the first time.

As it is, approximately about 10,000 men are needed to complete the division. Had those been provided they would have been raw recruits, requiring weeks of training.

The total lack of reserves is the greatest weakness of our army system. This was clearly illustrated by the mobilization in Texas.

weeks must elapse before, under the present plan, our army organizations could take the field with their full strength.

We can organize such a reserve as is needed if we make the enlistments in the regular army and the militia ten years, two or three years with the colors and the remaining seven or eight years absolutely free of obligation to come to the colors except in case of war.

Now we are losing from 30,000 to 40,000 men yearly from our militia and regular army combined, only about one-third in each service being re-enlistments.

The only obligation these men would have, in addition to their service obligation, would be to keep the adjutant general of the army and the adjutant general of the different states informed as to their whereabouts.

SAYS CASE NEVER CAME BEFORE JURY

MEMBER OF THE GRAND JURY MAKES A DENIAL OF THE STATEMENT RECENTLY MADE IN THE SEATON AFFAIR

Editor Herald:—In last week's paper, under the heading "Corra Seaton is Given Her Liberty," I notice an article of the sheriff's office says the reason for this action was that two grand juries had failed to indict her, when the facts of the matter are that the case has never been brought before a grand jury.

The would-be attempted prosecution has been one of the grandest farces ever pulled off at the expense of the over-burdened taxpayer, and has cost them several hundred dollars, perhaps close to the thousand mark.

BANKS REFUSE TO BUY CITY OR COUNTY WARRANTS

There has been an enormous increase in the demand for money in this city, and the banks have not only found it impossible to supply the demand, but have found it necessary to refuse to purchase any city or county warrants for the present at least.

The reason given for refusing to purchase additional city and county warrants is that the banks of the city have not the money now to use in this manner.

Efforts are being made to place some of the county warrants for road work with outside financial institutions, and it is believed that this can be done.
