OUR CALIFORNIA VISITORS

WHILE we people of Klamath Falls need not forget our loyalty to our own state, yet we should feel that we are only welcoming our own people when we extend the hand of friendship and welcome to our distinguished visitors from San Francisco today. We are as closely allied as brothers with the people of California. Capital from that state has assisted in a large measure in the development of our city and county. Former Californians are our neighbors and compose a large proportion of our citizenship. Many of them are numbered among our prominent and successful business men. Everywhere you go in this city and county you will find men who have left their California homes and come to Klamath to give of their experience and wealth toward building up and developing our great inland Empire.

Many of our men and women finished their education in the colleges of California, and large numbers of the younger generation are enrolled as students in their institutions of learning. Our business relations are even closer with the people of California than those of an educational and social nature. We doubt if there is one firm out of the hundred that is not represented here today which is not at the present doing business with some of the merchants of our county.

In view of these facts, we are not welcoming strangers today, but, rather, old friends have come to see us at our home, and it is with the warmest feeling of friendship that we extend to them the hospitality of our home, Klamath Falls. We would like to keep these men with us. We need such men. They are big men, men of business and capital, and it is such men and capital that Klamath county needs in developing the wonderful resources of our section. If our visitors cannot stay with us, we trust that they will come again and bring their friends with them.
