JUDGE BORDWELL EXTENDS THE TIME

MARCH 11, 1911

DARROW SATISFIED

The McNamarab's both appear to be cheerful, and they remain in a jovial frame of mind.

United Press Service

LOUISVILLE, March 11—Judge Darrow, who was in New York on Monday night, spent the day with the defense attorneys and appeared to be in high spirits. He was received by the attorney general, Mr. James A. McPherson, and was entertained at a dinner at the Waldorf Astoria. The trial of Charles L. McNamara is expected to last for at least two more weeks, and Judge Darrow is expected to remain in Louisville until that time.

DARROW SATISFIED

The McNamarab's both appear to be cheerful, and they remain in a jovial frame of mind.

United Press Service

LOUISVILLE, March 11—Judge Darrow, who was in New York on Monday night, spent the day with the defense attorneys and appeared to be in high spirits. He was received by the attorney general, Mr. James A. McPherson, and was entertained at a dinner at the Waldorf Astoria. The trial of Charles L. McNamara is expected to last for at least two more weeks, and Judge Darrow is expected to remain in Louisville until that time.

The McNamarab's both appear to be cheerful, and they remain in a jovial frame of mind.

United Press Service

LOUISVILLE, March 11—Judge Darrow, who was in New York on Monday night, spent the day with the defense attorneys and appeared to be in high spirits. He was received by the attorney general, Mr. James A. McPherson, and was entertained at a dinner at the Waldorf Astoria. The trial of Charles L. McNamara is expected to last for at least two more weeks, and Judge Darrow is expected to remain in Louisville until that time.

The McNamarab's both appear to be cheerful, and they remain in a jovial frame of mind.

United Press Service

LOUISVILLE, March 11—Judge Darrow, who was in New York on Monday night, spent the day with the defense attorneys and appeared to be in high spirits. He was received by the attorney general, Mr. James A. McPherson, and was entertained at a dinner at the Waldorf Astoria. The trial of Charles L. McNamara is expected to last for at least two more weeks, and Judge Darrow is expected to remain in Louisville until that time.

The McNamarab's both appear to be cheerful, and they remain in a jovial frame of mind.

United Press Service

LOUISVILLE, March 11—Judge Darrow, who was in New York on Monday night, spent the day with the defense attorneys and appeared to be in high spirits. He was received by the attorney general, Mr. James A. McPherson, and was entertained at a dinner at the Waldorf Astoria. The trial of Charles L. McNamara is expected to last for at least two more weeks, and Judge Darrow is expected to remain in Louisville until that time.

The McNamarab's both appear to be cheerful, and they remain in a jovial frame of mind.