A VALUABLE HELP

ONE OF the best things that has ever happened to Klamath Falls was the trip here of the Commercial Club excursionists, who are a bunch of live ones, and are not like a blind, to whom a wink is as good as a nod.
These men are keen, alert, up-to-the-minute commercial hustlers, who do not have to be shaken to be made to open their eyes to see what's before them.
Thus it was that as soon as they got a good look at the country which some of them had never seen and others had not seen for years, they were very favorably impressed.
Those who had never been here marveled at the expanse of open territory which met their view, enriched by lakes and other advantages more scenic than material.
Those who had not been in this country for years were practically speechless to record their impressions of the advancement made here within such a short time, the past two years alone having practically changed Klamath Falls from the small village to the city of pretentious mien, as well as changing the country roundabout from a doubtful state of development to a thriving and well settled district.

While the coming of the Rose City host was naturally of benefit to its members in making them cognizant of this country with which they can have business now and which will develop as fast as does the country, it also means that they will speak encouragingly of this region whenever they have occasion to. Chances are that when the subject is not raised otherwise it will be brought up by them merely through their enthusiasm over the future prospects of the Klamath basin.
They will boost for Klamath. They will speak a good word for it at any all times. They will tell what a large city it is, and what great strides it has made toward becoming a city of importance and a distributing point well worthy of remembrance. They will argue for the putting in of the railroad line to complete the gap now existing on the Klamath Falls-Naturo cutoff, which, when completed, will accomplish a wonderful good for this country and the stockholders of the railroad company as well. Not only will the proposed railroad via this city eliminate the heavy Siskiyou grade over which the main line now climbs, but it will be a great incentive to the development of the Central Oregon area which has long awaited an outlet for its products, a trackless region —speaking as to railroads—simply desiring for some appreciative railroad projector to come along and extend a friendly hand.

With the Portland contingent aware of the great advantages that are to be derived all around from the promotion of the Klamath country, and the new through line the good word will be spread plentifully.
The Portland men will help to promote the fact that the sooner a great railroad is somewhere within better call of the vast reaches of undeveloped but desirable agricultural and stock-raising land in Central Oregon, just that much sooner will the raising of hogs and cattle and the growing of food products be increased. The first railroad to get in will be the one to reap the real harvest, and the harvest will not keep the railroad waiting after it is built.
Central Oregon has no equal as a virgin territory awaiting for the eye that sees the future. It is true that the railroads have begun to look toward the great undeveloped Oregon territory with the eye of desire, but it takes more than the desire to get in and win. There must be the necessary faith and energy to back it, these being necessary to encourage investment necessary to accomplish the great need.

Some of the Portland boosters that were here will be in attendance today and tomorrow at the meeting of the Central Oregon Development League at Burns, for a delegation of over sixty men from the Rose City will be there, as against a meeting at Prineville in June that only totalled eighteen men, including those from Portland and everywhere else. This is another index of the growing feeling that Central Oregon must and shall have the opening into the markets of the world that its size and richness entitle it to.
With Portland, the metropolis of the state, and a city noted throughout America for its fairness of face and spirit, shaking hands with Klamath Falls across the unopened stretches of Oregon territory in the wish and will to get a better appreciation of the undeveloped area by the rest of the country, and a better connection between the two, it looks as if the happy enterprise would not be long in coming to attainment.

AN IMPORTANT EVENT

ON THURSDAY of this week will occur one of the greatest events in the history of Central Oregon, for on that day will be held a celebration at Bend commemorating the completion of the railroad to that city.
James J. Hill, the Empire Builder, will travel thousands of miles to be present to drive the golden spike and assist in the ceremonies. The two days will be practical holidays in Central Oregon, and one of the most picturesque gatherings ever assembled in the state will be present at Bend, as the country for a radius of several hundred miles is preparing to assist in the celebration.

This is an occasion where Klamath county should be well represented. It is true that a small party has already left here, and will be present at the celebration, but the importance of the occasion is so great that it would seem that every available automobile should be secured and that a delegation go to Bend from Klamath county that would be able to make a showing and get results. Klamath county cannot afford to lay still and not let Mr. Hill know that we want another railroad. We need that railroad badly, so why not get a move on and go after it. No better opportunity will probably ever offer itself, and it would seem a pity if the people of this county do not take advantage of it. The section around Bend has not half the inducements to offer a railroad that Klamath County has, and it did not get the road by waiting for it to come, and went after and worked continuously until they succeeded. Let Klamath county show Mr. Hill and the officials of his road why the railroad should be extended to Klamath Falls, and let them back up their argument by a rousing big delegation at the celebration.
Mr. and Mrs. Levi McDonald, who have been spending a couple of weeks in Langell Valley, have returned to this city.

ized by boiling before making. Our
