KLAMATH FALLS, OREGON
THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1911
A MIGHTY SLIM DELEGATION
IF IT IS a fact, as reported, that that there is some likelihood of James J. Hill building a railroad through here from Bend the news will be most welcome. If not, then the slim delegation which went from this city, to attend the celebration which is taking place at that city to celebrate the completion of railroad construction to that point is one of the greatest mistakes that this community has ever made. With Mr. Hill, who is frequently termed the empire builder, there to drive the golden spike into its bed and a rousing lot of boosters around him, that would be the time to get the ear of the railroad maker and impress him with the needs and opportunities that are in the Klamath basin.
 Those who left from this city included Judge Will B. Worden, Judge George T. Baldwin, Charles W. Eberlein, C. T. Oliver, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and a few other faithful leaders who are deeply interested in the welfare of this section. They took the long auto trip, close to 200 miles the round trip, with the hope and purpose of adding their best encouragement to make the Bend meeting—both those of the Central Oregon Development League and the railroad celebration—successful and to speak a good word for further efforts by Mr. Hill to reach this section, merely ready and waiting for a railroad to come in and harvest the gain that is to be had for the asking.
 But half a dozen, or two dozen, in a delegation at such an opportune moment with the interests of this city and environs at stake is not sufficient. Two dozen might be a respectable number as an index of the importance of the need of a railroad here, but the proper way to impress a man of Mr. Hill's caliber, while it does not necessarily depend on numbers only, would be to have a rousing, fat delegation, a hundred or so. Two hundred would be better.
 Portland sent a delegation of nearly 75 men to this city in a special train on a hunt for commerce and in an effort to better trade relations and to understand better the conditions and outlook for the Klamath Basin in material sense. If Portland, who does not need expansion and an outlet for products in anything like the measure this city and territory adjoining needs them, can afford to do such things as a side line, this city can certainly afford to attempt something on a considerable scale when the entire welfare of the community, practically, depends on it.
 Last week there was a county fair in Klamath county, backed, we are informed, by two men. Not enough men in the county took a sufficient interest in the event to give it the encouragement of good organization or system. All the work fell on the shoulders of a precious few—mighty few, at that. One of the sad features of this lack of unity was the failure to collect all the money due in admissions. It's no use to try to throw the blame for this on any one or two people, for one or two people cannot handle a county fair unless they have a barrel of money to do it with, and there was no barrel within reach in this instance.
 The lack of organization shown in pulling off the county fair, which as a fair was a rousing success—for which due praise is certainly to be given the handful or less of men who accomplished what they did under great difficulties—is an index of the general spirit in the city at this time. It is this same lack of pull-together in a tug-of-war style that gives the city such a small representation at Bend on the occasion of the visit of James J. Hill.

 Of course it would cost money to make the trip to Bend. Each man that took the trip might be out $100 for the journey if he made it by auto and entertained new acquaintances when he got there. He might figure that it was too expensive for the chance he was taking. But it is only a chance in that to get a railroad through here at once might not be effected. The sureness of the effort as a means of advertising the push and energy of Klamath Falls would be unquestioned. It would be a stepping stone to the accomplishment later of what is needed at once.

PRICE OF SHEEP ABNORMALLY LOW
SURPRISING STATE OF MARKET POSSIBLY DUE TO UNSETTLED TARIFF—NO PARITY WITH THE BEEF MARKET
 Special to The Herald
LAKEVIEW, Oct. 5.—The price of sheep is lower than it has been for some time, probably due to the unsettled condition of the tariff laws.
 While sheep are down, the cattle buyers are paying the highest price ever paid in the county for beef cattle, and the range is being cleaned up as never before in an attempt to gather stock for shipment.
 There seems to be no connection between the price of beef and mutton in this part of the country.
 Many well informed men engaged in the stock industry state that now is a good time for investors in the industry to take hold of the opportunity to secure ewes and breeding stock at a low figure, for there seems to be no reason why the price should remain down for any long period of time.

MANY LIVE ONES WENT TO BURNS
LAKEVIEW DELEGATION WAS LARGEST BUNCH OF BOOSTERS THAT EVER WENT SOUTH TO HOOT FOR LAKE COUNTY
 Special to The Herald
LAKEVIEW, Oct. 5.—Lakeview sent the largest delegation of "live wires" that ever cut loose from this section of the state to the Development League meeting at Burns this week. The delegation was headed by E. L. Britten of the Commercial Club, and contained such leading men as W. Lair Thompson, G. W. Rice, Frank Light, Vint Sealing, Jim Dodson, J. N. Watson, M. B. Brice and a host of others that filled a number of autos.
 The spirit of progress has taken hold on the people here in a way that is bound to make this section of the state reach out and get its share of the good things that are coming to the people of Oregon.
