NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION
 (Not coal lands)
 Department of the Interior, United States Land Office at Lakeview, Oregon, October 11, 1911.
 Notice is hereby given that Oscar L. Carter, whose postoffice address is Klamath Falls, Oregon, did on the 29th day of May, 1911, file in this office sworn statement and application No. 04680, to purchase lot 1, Section 4, township 37 S, range 10 E, Willamette Meridian, and the timber thereon, under the provisions of the act of June 3, 1878, and acts amendatory, known as the "Timber and Stone Law," at such value as might be fixed by appraisal, and that, pursuant to such application, the land and timber thereon have been appraised at a total of $465, the timber estimated at $20,000 board feet, at 75 cents per M., and the land nothing; that said applicant will offer final proof in support of his application and sworn statement on the 27th day of December, 1911, before R. M. Richardson, United States Commissioner, at Klamath Falls, Oregon.
 Any person is at liberty to protest this purchase before entry, or initiate a contest at any time before patent issues, by filing a corroborated affidavit in this office, alleging facts which would defeat the entry.
 A. W. ORTON,
 Register.

 LIVESTOCK PROGRESS

STATISTICS issued by the department of commerce and labor, bureau of the census, Washington, show that of the three states which comprise the Pacific coast, California stands first, Oregon second and Washington third in livestock.
 The value of livestock in each state in 1910 and 1900, with the increase in value and per cent, follows: California, $119,487,452, against $67,242,112, increase $52,245,340, or 77.7 per cent; Oregon, $59,333,291, against $33,915,248, increase $25,418,043, or 74.7 per cent; Washington, $48,734,493, against $33,915,207, increase $14,819,286, or 43.9 per cent.
 Oregon shows up poorer than either of the other states in amount of increase—in actual percentage or in dollars, either way you wish to figure it.
 We frequently hear from men who claim to know, who ought to know and who probably do know—since they are in the business—that there are large stretches of country in the state of Oregon which are ideally adapted to dairying and stock raising. Much of that country is at the very doors of this city, in the great Klamath Basin.
 With such a condition or resources and natural advantages is there any reason why Oregon should be the tail-ender in the line? For that's just what she is. In the percentage, her 74.9 increase in livestock valuation in the decade ended last year compares with 77.7 per cent in California and 43.9 per cent in Washington.
 Good sugar beets are raised in this region, and the culms from the beet sugar industry, as well as the "tailings"—we use this word under pressure of haste—make some of the best food that ever tickled the palate of a hungry steer.
 It's mighty cheap food, too.
 So here is the layout: Klamath territory is wide and far for the stock raiser and for the sugar beet grower. There is all sorts of room for both his kind hereabouts. The soil is in many places adapted to the growth of the sugar beet, and there is ample territory for the herding and raising of thousands upon thousands of cattle. Even without sugar beets, there would be plenty of advantages for the cattle raiser, but the advantage of the sugar beet in addition makes the proposition so much stronger that nobody offers any argument to discount the situation.
 Progress of one will mean progress of the other for the more sugar beets that are grown here the more cheap feed there will be for stock raisers to depend on, and the more cattle that are raised the more the beet sugar men will be encouraged to make a demand for their product with the prospect of selling the left over part of their working product. The more beet sugar men engaged in making sugar the more there will be growing the beet.
 There is no better time than now for encouraging both.
 Farms are necessary to any well regulated, prosperous country, and this region has not enough farms by far. It will not be many years until farms will be at the very gates of the city growing the finest kind of things to eat, but there is no good reason for not hastening the time. In fact, there is every good and logical reason for speeding the happy day.
 As it is now the demand for cattle is so great that cattle are shipped out of this section, and the price at present is higher than it has been in a long time. Not only that, but the outside demand, which makes the market, is such that the meat that is butchered here from range fed steers is often not of the choicest. The stock raisers have such a call on them for what they can ship out that they've no time to fool with anything like fancy fed cattle for home consumption.

 The demand from the outside is such that the vast majority of young cattle are sold and shipped to buyers who can give them the post graduate dining course elsewhere in spots where the fancy feed is more plenty and more economical.
 Have you heard any cattle men complaining of low prices or poor market lately?
 Hardly.
 The reason they do not complain is because they are getting along, and the people of Klamath Falls will be getting along better if they urge for more farmers, more cattle and a speedier settlement of the vast areas hereabouts which are yawning for settlers.
 With a united effort and a courageous movement the farmers will be brought in here the stock will be raised, Klamath Falls and its neighbors will all reap the benefit, and this region will have the satisfaction of seeing the relative figures on cattle industry in the Pacific coast states change favorably to Oregon, and of knowing that the home folks have had their shoulder to the wheel and done their share of the pushing.

Success or Failure Luck or Foresight

No matter whether or not luck is essential to success we can all do much to help ourselves by taking a look into the future and following the old trodden path of building a home. It means the investment of your money in values you know something about, and while there's not the possibility of quick riches, you have the assurance of your investment being safe. From our experience of many years in the lumber business we believe now is as good a time to build as will ever be presented and we want to talk over with you any plans you may have in mind for building a home.
