A LESSON IN FINANCE

The fact that the city is burdened with a debt and has had a difficult time in arranging to road clear its title to credit is not a good reason for casting discredit on the city nor stirring its good name.

While it is true that the condition of the city treasury has of late become such that there has been a depreciated credit, it is not just to say that the city has no credit, nor is it just to blame everything on the city council.

The depreciated credit has come about very naturally from the extraordinary expenditures of the city in improvements, especially at a time when many people have been feeling the stress of times as hardly the best. In order to keep anywhere near the pace needed by the city to get along, it was necessary to spend money, or, to speak more correctly, to incur indebtedness which the city could not meet right away.

With county warrants at a discount, it is hardly any wonder that the city warrants have dropped from par to about 75 in some instances. Until the county and city could get in some of the money due in taxes it was to be expected that the price of warrants would go down under the circumstances. The city warrants, as a rule, follow the course of the county warrants, or vice versa—at least both brands of securities have a sympathy in fluctuation. They are largely of the same nature, and hold together in a sort of dovetail fashion.

It can hardly be asserted with any show of justification that the trouble is due to waste. It is true that the city in some certain instances has spent money which might have been kept, but as a rule not a very large amount of money has been used but what the city will get the benefit.

One of the worst features of the depreciated credit is the enormous prices which have been asked the city for supplies and work, a proposition that works something like rolling a big snowball, for the more it grows, the more room there is to hang more on it.

But with a prospective bond issue to cover the outstanding warrants will be as good as wheat in the mill, so that whatever the city wants to buy in future can be had at reasonable prices, the same as are charged to private individuals.

It is a good lesson to the city, if allowed to have its proper influence.

NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that there are funds in the city treasury for the redemption of the following warrants. Interest on same will cease from date hereof:

2655, 2657, 2659, 2660, 2661, 2662, 2663, 2664, 2665, 2666, 2667, 2668, 2675, 2671, 2672, 2673, 2674, 2675, 2676, 2677, 2678, 2679, 2680, 2681.

Dated at Klamath Falls, Ore., this 26th day of October, 1911.

GRAIN GROWERS MAY EXPORT PRODUCT FROM STATE

Dissatisfaction Expressed Over Low Price of Cereals, and Talk of a Combine Among the Millers Being Heard

Special to The Herald

LAKEVIEW, Oct. 27.—The grain growers in the valley here are thinking of shipping their grain to Sacramento and other places on account of an alleged combine among the millers of the valley to place the price of grain at the lowest possible notch. It is now $1.15 at Lakeview and $1.10 at New Pine Creek.

It is claimed that there is no reason for the low price except that the mills have a supply of grain at their disposal in the valley that will keep their rollers working for some time without having to go out of the county to California points, as has been done many times in the past. The rate from Davis Creek to Sacramento is low enough to warrant the growers shipping, thus compelling the mills to either come off their high horse or import grain.

A REST CURE

Matrimony is described by a prominent writer as being a "rest cure." Be that as it may, if you want to see one of the brightest and most refined comedies of the year, don't fail to witness the production of "Is Marriage a Failure?" to be given at Houston's Opera House, October 30 and 31.

Someone said that people wanted to laugh, even if they didn't know what they were laughing at. This play is said to be one of the best laugh provokers of the present time. As its title indicates, the story is written around this question, and although it greatly amuses the plot is still a sensible one. J. G. & Glen Harper, Inc., have organized an unusually good company of artists to present this comedy. The scenery is appropriate and the wardrobe handsome, completing one of the most pleasing productions of the season.
