

COURT IS OPENED BY JUDGE BENSON

END OF BRIEF ARBITRARY ADJOURNMENT MADE NECESSARY TO GIVE TIME FOR LOOKING UP DECISIONS

At 10 o'clock this morning Judge Henry L. Benson held another session of open court, after an adjournment of the arbitrary kind taken at the close of the session last week.

The interim was made necessary by the pressure for time for the court to look into the books bearing on the rather ticklish case of Dunlap vs. Lewis, which arose over the matter of about $3,000 in paving assessments due on a property traded, which each man would prefer to have paid by the other party to the issue.

It is not known just when the court will be able to give a decision in the case, and many of the local attorneys are of the opinion that questions of fact involved in the case may yet have to be submitted to a jury.

BEATTIE ADMITS GUILT—EXPIATES

Then ensued one of the strangest, bitterest legal battles that Virginia has ever known.

Throughout the trial Paul Beattie, star witness for the prosecution, and little 17-year-old Beulah Binford, the sweetheart of the prisoner, were kept locked in the Henrico county jail. Paul was on the stand for two days, but the girl was never taken to court to tell her story. She had been summoned as a witness by the prosecution, but the shrewd lawyers believed that her attachment for Henry Beattie would make her an undesirable witness, and she was never placed on the stand.

In her stead her mother, a big, middle-aged woman, told the story of her daughter's relations with Henry Beattie; his love for the girl, and his renewal of their intimacy after his marriage. After three weeks of taking testimony and argument, the twelve Chesterfield county farmers retired one evening to the jury room, knelt down and prayed for Divine guidance, discussed the evidence, knelt and prayed again, and then filed into the court room with a verdict of guilty. Judge Watson immediately pronounced the death sentence, fixing November 24th, today, as the date of execution.

An appeal to the higher courts failed, and Beattie fixed his hope on an application for pardon, reprieve or commutation of sentence to Governor Mann. After a short consideration, however, Governor Mann, in a scathing statement, declined to grant the pardon, and expressed the opinion that Beattie was attempting to escape the penalty of a crime of which he knew he was guilty.
