CHRISTMAS RED CROSS FILM

The moving picture is recognized as a valuable educational factor, if rightly used. Fortunately, the men who have developed the business of manufacturing the films in this country have not been blind to every consideration except money making. Comparatively few seem to have yielded to the temptation to prostitute this great invention by catering to the sensational, the low and the depraved; instead, most of them have been wise and far-sighted enough to see the enormous educational possibilities of the moving picture, and to endeavor to build up their enterprise on a solid foundation.

In no way is this better shown than by the co-operation between the Thos. A. Edison company of Orange, N. J., and the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Each year, just before the holidays, the Edison company releases to the innumerable moving picture theaters a specially prepared film, designed to show the awful danger of the "white plague" and to aid in the sale of the Red Cross seal, the little stamp which, by the million, adorns our Christmas packages and carries its lesson everywhere. The film this year, released December 5th, is called "The Awakening of John Bond."

It is a graphic and truthful portrayal of the dangers of tuberculosis and of the personal responsibility of each one for existing conditions.

It should be shown, again and again, in every town in the land—for what village is now so poor that it does not have a moving picture theater? The Journal of the American Medical Association requests that all physicians and all members of charitable societies ask to have this film shown to the public. It is by far the best of a number of public health films turned out by the Edison company, which is fully justified in its announcement that it "has been able not only to produce a film of high dramatic value, but also one of great educational benefit."

UNIVERSITY STUDENTS GET HOLIDAYS TO SELVES

Some Will Go to Their Homes to Spend Yuletide, While Others Will Endeavor to Entertain Themselves at Eugene

Special to The Herald EUGENE, Dec. 14.—Tomorrow the university will close its doors for the Christmas vacation, and the students for the most part will return to their homes over the state.

Some, however, will remain in Eugene. Those who stay behind will do their best to have a good time and dispense among themselves the Christmas good cheer.

There will be a number of informal parties and Christmas and New Year dinners, at which the students will make the best of a Christmas away from home.

Many of the students have already obtained positions in the stores for during the holiday rush, and will try to add to their stock of funds in this way. Some who have fallen behind in their class work will take advantage of the vacation to catch up, while many of the seniors are planning to make inroads on the preparation of their theses.

The university opens again on January 3d.
