Capital and Labor Must Be Kept Busy

In the right channels to keep the nation prosperous. National prosperity is the collective result of local prosperity and "confidence" is the mysterious thing back of both. Confidence is necessary in all walks of life to bring success, for without it there can be no future. Our own town needs the confidence of her people. A town is known by its works just as a man is known by his deeds. There's no better way to show your confidence in the town than to be known as a home owner and no quicker way to gain your share of the independence for which our Revolutionary fathers fought than to own a home. Better start today—come in and talk it over with us—we can give you a good idea of the total cost as well as the kind of timber you'll need.

SOCIALISM

TO THE mind of Bird S. Coler, big democrat and ex-controller of the state of New York the most threatening problem for solution by the people of this nation is socialism. He sees socialism looming up before the country as an insidious force that must be met and dealt with severely, or else the country will suffer ill consequences. He has written pamphlets on the question, and has given much thought to it.

"The election of twenty mayors in the United States by the socialist party must awaken people to the growing strength of the movement we know as socialism," he is quoted as saying recently in Portland. "My impression is that before it is generally accepted something of its nature should be understood, and something also of its origin. It is founded on the philosophy of some German and French writers, the latter being mainly French writers of the general school. These writings in all respects are materialistic.

"Their teaching is that religion is a reflex of economic conditions, that its function is to maintain class domination. All these writers condemn religion, all of them declare in the materialistic philosophy of which socialism is the economic expression, there is no room for a God.

"This denial of the existence of a God belongs naturally to socialism because the success of the system supposes an emphasis on life in this world inconsistent with religious belief. The promise upon which socialism gains its converts is a paradise on earth, and that promises must be made important to be made appealing by the denial of a paradise hereafter.

"These doctrines the Godless public schools of our country have prepared the public mind to receive. No one can deny and indeed most of the advocates of the public school system admit freely that all religion has been driven out of the state schools, that a nation founded on the principle of religious liberty now seems to believe that its safety in the future depends upon the repression of religion. The consequence is that many of our young men and young women leave school with a more or less dissembled contempt for real religious belief. The incomplete information the public schools have given to them leaves them with the idea that the fashion of the hour is against religion, and that real belief in a personal God belongs to a less enlightened age, that science has exploded in some way, the deaths with which they are now familiar, the old theory of a personal Creator with authority to prescribe moral laws and the power to call to account that other old fogy ghost—the immortal soul.

"Now this is altogether a false view of life and of science, whatever it may be of the fashion of our times. The most glorious names in science today, for instance, are those of believers in God. The Darwinian evolution theory is nowhere questioned except among physiologists; the public school that knows nothing of real biological study believes it as it one time believed in the Bible.

"The result is a growing socialist party, dominated as most parties by politicians, but informed by materialistic philosophers and recruited from the God-less public schools."
