MYSTERY OF COAL BUNKER TERRIFIES TARS ABOARD

Blazing Balls of Fire in Intense Darkness Proved to Be Eyes of Monkey, Which, With Other Jungle Products Tried to Keep Warm

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 9.—When Ah Fong, a stoker on the British steamer Strathlyn, arriving from Yokohama, entered the bunkers during her voyage across the Pacific, he was frightened out of his wits by seeing two blazing balls of fire in the dense darkness. Rushing out he told his countrymen he had met the devil, and immediately the Chinese quarters aboard were filled with fumes from a multitude of candles and joss sticks burned to appease the gods.

After this the entire Chinese crew refused to enter the holds or bunkers when ordered to do so, and mutiny had almost broken out when the officers discovered that a crazed monkey had taken refuge in the coal.

The animal was one of five brought from the Orient. All suffered terribly in the wintry Pacific weather, and climbing to the top of the smokestack they inhaled gases from the furnaces in an effort to keep warm. Four were asphyxiated, and the fifth became crazed, seeking shelter in the coal below, where his blazing eyes caused a near mutiny.

From a 46,000 Acre Oyster Farm All the Way Under Seal

The new-ice cold container—called—the Sealshipt. Small size 1/10 gal., enough for a small family.

Of the thousands of miles of seacoast only a few are suited to oyster raising. A few miles along the North Atlantic coast, a few stretches in the protected waters of Long Island Sound and Great South Bay, a tract in the Chesapeake Bay and some acreage in the Gulf of Mexico—these are the only places in which oysters are grown. Of these oyster lands the Sealshipt System owns 46,000 acres—a gigantic farm—which grows the cream of American oysters. The waters, and the oysters, are always under the supervision of the famous Lederle Laboratories—as a guarantee of purity.

Now we can offer you these famous Sealshipt Oysters in Sealshipts—sealed, individual packages, containing just enough for a meal, as shown above.

Moreover, these Sealshipts enable you to get your choice of the world's best oysters—just as you buy your choice in cuts of meat.

You get solid oyster meats—no waste, a really economical food in individual ice cold containers.

The Chesapeake Bay oysters, for example, are 20c. for the small Sealshipt—40c. for the large Sealshipt.

Northern Standards—25c. for the small Sealshipt—50c. for the large Sealshipt.

Blue Points—30c. for the small Sealshipt—60c. for the large Sealshipt.

(The words stamped on top of the Sealshipt is your guarantee of the particular kind of oyster you prefer)
