

RICHESON WASTES AWAY WITH APPROACH OF DEATH

Self-Reliance Gone, He Is Now a Craven Coward, Too Wretched to Permit Light in Cell to Be Turned Out During Night

BOSTON, Jan. 24.—Wasted and only a shadow of his former athletic self, Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, brutal murderer of pretty little Avis Linnell, whom he betrayed under a promise of marriage, and afterward poisoned by giving her a drug he said would hide her shame, cowers in the gloomy old Charles street jail on the verge of utter collapse.

The shadows of the electric chair, the curt, cold words of Judge Sanderson, delivered more than a week ago, "to be put to death by having a current of electricity sent through your body, and may God in his infinite goodness have mercy on your soul," still ring in his ears. And, were he to know the truth, that all hope of a commutation of his sentence has vanished, he would, according to Sheriff Quinn, who has him watched night and day, become a gibbering maniac within a few hours.

Quinn tonight is troubled. He declared that all of the self-reliance that formerly marked the man, and even the desperation of despair which resulted in his taking the "gambler's chance," and admitting his guilt in the hope of saving his life, has departed. He is now a craven coward, so nerve-racked that the light cannot be turned off in his cell at night, kept from insanity only by the faint hope that the governor's council will yet intervene and save him from ignominious death, even though the alternative is a life spent behind prison walls.

ROMANCE FOR SHOE-GIRL IN FAR EASTERN FACTORY

She Slips Note Into Box of Covers for Pidal Extremities, and Same Is Read With Ardor by Rancher in California

United Press Service
SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., Jan. 24.—The patron saint of "hunches and dreams" has manufactured some real romance for Miss Edith Trevor, employed in a Manchester, N. H., shoe factory, and a wealthy young Del Rosa rancher.

Miss Trevor slipped a note into a shoe box which fell into the rancher's hands. It expressed a longing for a true heart and a home in California. The rancher sent his photograph, got hers in reply, and everything's ready for Chapter II.

The shoe firm will not tell the name of the rancher. He's a good customer and the manager of the shoe house has an eye to future—largely increasing—business.

Police Give Order to Proprietors of Barbary Coast Resorts, Where Masterpieces Are Clad Principally in Spirit of Sans Souci

United Press Service
SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 24.—Police here want the proprietors of Barbary Coast resorts to put clothes on Sculptor Arthur Putnam's masterpieces or take 'em away. Greek satyrs, fauns and nymphs, attired principally in an atmosphere of frivolity, the handiwork of one of America's foremost artists, are frowned upon.

"The artistic will appreciate the higher idea," declare the dive keepers. "And the others who come here won't be shocked; so what's the kick?"

A policeman who acknowledges he knows nothing of Greek mythology, but who claims the eye of an Anthony Comstock, started the kick. Now Chief of Police White is going to take a party of censors to the Coast to pass on the shockers.

MAGNIFICENT FRUIT SHOW IN CALIFORNIA NEXT MONTH

Some of Beautiful and Artistic Designs Will Be Made for Display at Second Annual Orange Exposition, Which is to be Biggest Ever

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif., Jan. 24.—Five million Golden California prize oranges woven into scores of beautiful and artistic designs will be on display at the second annual orange show in San Bernardino, February 19 to 24. It will be the most elaborate, large and comprehensive exposition of the citrus fruit industry ever held in America.

The exposition is a permanent institution, and is representative of what California orchardists the past year sold for more than $50,000,000. It will not be confined wholly to fruit displays, but will include all allied fruit industries in the way of mechanical appliances for packing and handling the fruit, and the many by-products secured from the citrus fruits.

Tables 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 known as the big five tables at the Golden Rule Store will represent for nineteen hundred twelve more real bargains than will be found in any other store in Klamath County, say nothing of the entire stock. These tables are located in Section 1, between aisles 1 and 2 and every article found on them would be considered real bargains on Broadway in New York City. This plan will be followed closely during the year 1912 by all Golden Rule Stores, and you may expect to find some extra values every day during the year by just taking a few moments time to investigate. REMEMBER, no Golden Rule Store ever has or ever will be undersold, and while this is strictly a legitimate advertising plan by which the people are to receive the benefit, it is also intended to show you that this store can and does furnish new, crisp, up-to-date merchandise at a lower cost than other stores do.
