Little Rhapsody and Interleaved
Indications are that in the near future we will see an epoch of great industrial activities on the Pacific slope, partly on account of the Panama canal bearing its completion, partly on account of preparation for the great international exposition to be held here three years hence; and chiefly on account of certain achievements already attained by which we invite such an epoch.

The three states on the Pacific coast have already removed the worst barrier against substantial development, genuine economy and true industrial progress by adopting the initiative, the referendum and the recall, and thus making it possible to frustrate any rash action of political plotters, fussy reformers, fossilized standard-bearers—the sorry mess of maladministrators who otherwise have such unrestrained opportunity to mismanage our legislative affairs and causing unbusiness and unliving, destructive to necessary enterprise.

Although a representative form of government is supposed to promote the people's welfare and carry out its composite will—still the fact remains that such a mess of political plotters, noisy, but shallow, reformers, to-wit, representatives for special privilege seeking concerns, so often manage to be elected legislators, and unless the people have a way to check their misbehavior, many a necessary enterprise becomes more or less of a gamble, as it is put in jeopardy by such lawmakers.

But in the initiative, referendum and recall we have effective remedies—through which to counteract such predicaments.

Well do I know that President Taft does not believe in our qualification to apply these remedies. He considers us utterly stupid concerning such matters, and he thinks we ought to vest all our legislative affairs irrevocably in great, wise fathers, like himself. And I do not blame him, remembering as I do how financiers and trust magnates generally have regarded us in the past; how they have looked down on the rank and file of the common people as being a disruptive, irrational set of rascals that had to be subdued by wily plots; and how they often conspired against us and brought on great panics, thus coercing us to submit to their will. But I am glad we are now getting to be a little more self-respecting, and we may soon be able to positively refuse being so treated.

Therefore the conspirators find they must change tactics. They see clearly that the only way they can turn the coming national election in their favor is by letting the financial and industrial activities of the country go on undisturbed as much as possible, so the people may be pacified and induced to rally to the support of Taft—select him and his associates without regard to whether they are republicans or democrats—only they be trusted by the trusts.

Thus the coming national election will be proposed as a truce between plutocracy and the common people—between capital and labor—between the conspirators and those conspired against.

It is early yet to predict the final outcome of the truce. But of this much we can rest assured, that those states that have reclaimed to the people the last say in legislative affairs will forge to the fore rank in mental and moral development, as well as in all kind of industrial activities. They will gain the good will of the philanthropic spirit which is watching the progress of the human race; they will attract honest capitalists and progressives of all classes—such as do not seek their own selfish interests—but also rejoice in making nature yield of her bounty to the betterment of mankind.

Of course, grafters, gamblers and parasites who have no initiative to accomplish anything useful in life, will feel out of tune with such a regime. But we ought not to waste our sympathy on them; but, true to our purpose, bow to the mark, while we see the uplift totter.

Although foreboding, some of my socialist comrades may disagree with me, I will add the following inference:

The trouble with the Bryan, Roosevelt, La Follette revolutionary, anarchistic brand of socialists who insist on the lynching of big business is their inability to understand the evolutionary laws and realize that the trust is the father of socialism; and that he in his crude way is teaching his heir the A, B, C of how to conduct big business and develop the world's resources. And that, therefore, the heir ought to be amiable, even though his father be both crude and cruel, as it is hard to tell how soon he may become entirely incompetent, and the heir obliged to shoulder all his affairs.

I am optimistic—I think we are lucky that the trusts instead of the government own the railroads, the mines and the factories, because if the government did own them they would be used simply as machinery for graft and debauchery, and as a huge drawback on human progress.

I hope we will be able to prevent government ownership of such means until every citizen of the United States be granted a common right of direct legislation; and the people as a whole learn how to apply it properly. Then, and not before, will government ownership be safe.

KLAMATH REPUBLICAN

THE HOME PAPER OF KLAMATH AND LAKE COUNTIES

IT has been estimated that half a million dollars was spent by the farmers of this section last year with mail order houses. A little money spent in judicious advertising would secure this trade to the Klamath Falls business man. Can any merchant afford to neglect this opportunity?

The KLAMATH REPUBLICAN covers every section of

Counties

It already has the circulation. The farmers want to know what inducements you have to offer them to trade with you. If you do not tell them you alone are to blame for their patronage of mail order houses.
