

FIND USE FOR WHITE ROCK ALONG SACRAMENTO

United Press Service

SAN FRANCISCO, June 5.—The tons of smooth, almost white rock that have lined the banks of Northern California streams for years as the result of the operation of mining dredgers, and that have been considered an obstruction to agriculture, will no longer be such an impediment. Within recent years use has been found for this rock, formerly considered waste, and it has a real commercial value. The Southern Pacific company in its double track work and in the usual course of maintenance, is using many tons of this rock.

For years it has been piled high on the banks of the rivers and smaller streams. It was useless for levee work, and was pronounced a detriment to the country. Now, the ordinary sized rocks—about the size of a boy's hand—are used for track ballast without any crushing. The larger boulders are broken into both ballast and gravel. Many tons of this same rock have also been used by the Southern Pacific in preparing the concrete for its new bridges across the Sacramento and American rivers.

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE (Contributed)

Mrs. Lucy Loosley, familiarly known as Grandma Loosley, died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. John Smart, near Fort Klamath, on Tuesday morning, May 28th, 1912, after an illness of about a month. She was born in Muskatine, Iowa, May 22, 1824, and was consequently 88 years and 6 days old at the time of her death.

Mrs. Loosley was a daughter of J. B. Walling, who removed to Oregon with his family and settled on a donation claim near Amity, Yamhill county, Oregon, in 1847, where the daughter was married to John Loosley April 1, 1854.

The home of the Loosleys was at McMinnville until they established their residence in Wood River Valley in 1872, where she resided until her death, and where Mr. Loosley died about twelve years ago. Mrs. Loosley was the mother of twelve children, seven sons and five daughters, and ten of these remain to mourn her death. She also leaves thirty-one grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren. A host of friends will miss her, for there is hardly a home in the community where she spent so many years of her life where she did not perform some deed of kindness or mercy.

She was an earnest, practical Christian, and early united with the United Brethren church, and later with the M. E. church at Klamath Agency, Oregon. She lived an exemplary, upright life, and died peacefully, trusting in the Savior. She was a devoted wife, a loving mother and a faithful friend. That she may rest in peace is the prayer of a loving daughter.
