MOSQUITO EXTERMINATION

MOSQUITOS can be—indeed, are being—eliminated from human experience in the United States. The "Jersey mosquito" is not the exclusive property of that commonwealth alone; it breeds in the salt water marshes all the way from Massachusetts to Florida, wherever a fresh water stream dilutes the ocean saltiness sufficiently to attract the mosquito. Mosquitoes of the salt marsh group are not disease breeding, however, though more intensely annoying than others. The Anopheles, which spreads malaria, and the Stegomyia, which conveys yellow fever, propagate in fresh water, in stagnant pools, even in standing water in the houses. The greater number of species seldom travel more than a few hundred yards from their breeding places, and away from salt marshes, most places are locally infested; these facts place the problem of mosquito extermination squarely before the individual householder and the community immediately interested.

Most mosquitoes, certainly those of the anopheles tribe, in which the female of the species is far more deadly than the male—are active only after dark. To rid a house of them one must fumigate with pyrethrum powder or some other substance that will make a dense smoke, taking care that no mosquitoes are allowed to lurk in remote places to which the fumes have no access. A pound of pyrethrum is necessary for every thousand feet of interior space. Screens, unless absolutely tight, with a mesh of twenty to the inch, are useless against mosquitoes.

According to the Journal of the American Medical Association, the only means of permanently preventing mosquitoes is the destruction of their breeding places, which may be anywhere that water can accumulate and stand for ten days or more. It is very well to drain marshes, ponds, fountains and wet places in lawns and gardens; but extermination will not be thorough and effective unless one realizes that no body of water can be too small for a mosquito nursery. Myriads may breed in puddles by the roadside; in little-used horse troughs, in chicken pans in poultry yards, in water cups standing on the frames of grindstones, in water that accumulates in garden or fields, especially in clayey soil, in water pitchers in unused guest rooms, in vases in which water has not frequently been changed, in discarded tin cans in back yards, in sewer catch basins—in fact, in any place where half a pint of water is allowed to stand. Since mosquitoes breed only in standing water, to eliminate them it is necessary simply to find and to drain or to oil all the possible breeding places.

The city of Hartsville, S. C., little as to size, but big in enterprise, has for several years past annually employed measures which other communities may well emulate. Its health board first distributed to all householders circulars pointing out the dangers of mosquitoes and recommending screens and constant supervision of premises to prevent breeding. Then the council surveyed the entire city, drained low places where rain water accumulated and made weekly inspections of all premises and ditches in town, putting kerosene regularly on any water that could not be drained or emptied (an ounce of kerosene for each fifteen square feet of water surface). Most of the breeding places were found in back yards. Dr. W. Eggleston, the health commissioner, reports that malaria, though very prevalent a decade ago, is now a practically a negligible disease. The inhabitants of Hartsville, it is said, now sit on their unscreened porches in the evenings with no discomfort from mosquitoes. If every community in the country would follow the example of Hartsville, the mosquito problem would soon cease to vex us.

VAUDEVILLE FOUR ARE CLEVER ACTORS

One of the best vaudeville shows seen here for some time opened a three nights' engagement last night at the opera house. The aggregation will present a new program tonight, and then a different one tomorrow night. The motion pictures interspersed between the vaudeville acts made as effective a hit as the frivolity and hilarity that dominated what once made Nat Goodwin famous, and entitled "All Mixed Up." The Irish Aristocrats, Mr. Troxell and Miss Winchell, were inimitable. The confusion arising out of the discovery of a puppy dog by the rich heiress bride donated by her benefactor uncle and the finding of a baby in the same kind of basket, led to wrangles between the duet of married couples that set the house into uproarious mirth.

The company, which contains only four people, is unquestionably a highly meritorious one.
