KLAMATH FALLS, OREGON
FRIDAY, JULY 5, 1912

MIXING UP

By Joe Bush

"Ugh!"
The speaker was a great, big man. He had long hair and wore a suit of clothes all ragged around the edges. He also had feathers on his head, leather things on his feet instead of shoes, and his face was all streaked up with red, white and blue. A little girl stood looking up at him.

"Do you like this town?" asked the maiden.

"Ugh!" answered the Big Chief, for it was the big one.

"What do you mean?" persisted the little girl.

"I mean, my dear," responded the chieftan, "that I have come here from the south, two days in march, and by the railroad 86 miles, and the big 'Ugh!' I have been grunting indicates that Klamath Falls is all right, and I wish I lived here."

This is conclusive proof that the local Redmen know how to entertain their visiting brethren.

And Teddy, and Taffy and Wilson were forgotten yesterday. But it was glorious to be a Redman.

There was but a single mystery in the parade. A couple of ladies drove along in a well decorated turnout. There was not a sign to be seen. Everyone knew that this was intended to typify the beauty of Eastern Oregon. No guessing about this. Then there was a dray loaded down with a piano. Everyone knew that some enterprising piano salesman had taken advantage of this opportunity to advertise his wares. But there was a mystery.

A wagon loaded with beer kegs, or kegs of beer; which was it? A lot of dry people did not know; otherwise that wagon might have been turned out of the regular line of march.

And then came the ball game. There were those who proclaimed victory for individual clubs even before the first inning had been concluded. But there was one man from Keno. I know this, because of what he said: "This isn't fair. Two men throwing balls is against all rules of the game."

The writer was not certain, so he inquired: "What do you mean, sir?" "If there ain't two men in the pitcher's box out there I never saw a ball game," was the reply.

The writer arrived at the conclusion that the speaker had never before seen a ball game, and also that the town of Keno was numbered among those in which it is against the law to dispense strong alcoholic stimulants. Otherwise, ye wise men, explain the two pitchers and the two balls.

And to show that we are all human and that it is not only on the Nation's birthday that we are prone to look upon the wine when it is red, or beer, let us remember the story of the grand old father who attempted to start his son on the path of rectitude and sobriety.

"Now, my son," said the Grand Old Man, "I want you to profit by my experience. I have made it a rule that whenever I see double it is time for me to go to bed. For instance, my boy, you see those two handsome women approaching us from the elevator? If it seemed to me that there were four women, I would be sure that my bedtime had arrived."

"But, father," the anxious youth spoke up, "there is but one woman coming this way from the elevator." All of which goes to show that everybody had a good time yesterday.

Also, who did not envy that youth who played the star part in the parade of buttoning up the shoes of that charming young lady?

The Haymakers' band got mixed up in the repertoire of pieces selected for the parade because one of the members insisted on playing through his nose. The rest of the bunch couldn't tell whether it was "Dixie" or "Marching Through Georgia" that was intended. Anyway, the Haymakers' got by.

Among those present and who walked in the big parade was the tuba player. Whenever there was a rest this same tuba player sat on his horn. The clarinet player tried to do the same, but he did not sit real comfortable.

NEW CHINA WILL SOON ADOPT GOVERNMENT FORM

United Press Service
PEKIN, July 5.—Theoretically the national convention to be called together probably within the next few weeks will adopt a form of government for "New China," but really provisional President Yuan Shi Kai will have things practically his own way. The president's plan for a permanent government, which is believed certain of adoption, is as follows:

The lawmakers will be divided into two groups, senators and representatives, the former serving six and the latter four years apiece. The number of senators will be equal in each province, but the representatives will be chosen according to population. The provincial assemblies will select senators from their own membership. The voters of the various prefectures will choose electors, who will meet at the various capitals to elect representatives from each province.

The ballot will be given to every male Chinese above the age of 25 who pays a specified tax, can read and write. The exemptions from this class are criminals, bankrupts, the insane, opium smokers, soldiers or sailors actually in service, students, monks, priests or preachers of religion and administrative, judicial or police officers.

In liberal circles grave objection is raised to the fact that the franchise is not only considerably restricted, but that voting is far from direct. The common view is that President Yuan is trying to concentrate political power in a small group under his own control.

N. Marchand, Ward 26 ave., Klamath Falls, Ore., says: "About two years ago I first noticed symptoms of kidney trouble. My back pained me intensely, and I was obliged to arise many times at night, owing to too frequent passages of kidney secretions. Often my back was so weak that I had to quit work. Doan's Kidney Pills were finally brought to my attention, and I began using them. They restored my kidneys to a normal condition and removed the pains in my back. I give Doan's Kidney Pills credit for my cure, and highly recommend them to other kidney sufferers."

SPORTS GOT THEIR FULL MONEY'S WORTH

"Bud" Anderson Easily Proves His Superiority Both as a Fighter and a Clever Boxer—Interesting Preliminaries

Outclassed and outpointed at every turn of the game, Charley (Roughhouse) Burns suffered defeat, which he announced himself at the conclusion of the eighth round, at the opera house, before a three-fourth house. The fight proved that Bud Anderson has developed much improvement, and places him in a position to gain a metropolitan reputation, which in this instance means San Francisco.

The tournament opened with two preliminaries. In the first Young Jack Johnson and Jack Price contended in a four round bout. No decision was rendered at the close of the quartet, it being simply an exhibition feature of the program.

Fred Anderson and Young McLeellan then had a "go" as the chief preliminary. Anderson is much heavier and stronger than McLeellan, but the latter fought gamely, and was practically knocked out twice in the fourth round, but came spiritedly back, only to be in a moment knocked out and taking the count.

In the main event the contestants entered the ring at 10:10. In the first round Anderson forced the fight, inflicting some terrific body blows. Burns in this round, as in all the others, was merely reaching for Anderson's face and head, looking for a knockout.

In the second round Anderson led with breast, face and kidney blows. Burns tumbled Anderson off his feet with a violent blow on the head. The crowd cheered the activity of the third round, in which Burns suffered acute punishment, and which Anderson commenced the tactics that won him the battle, fierce blows on the back of the neck, succeeded by kidney blows.

This was the scheme of things to the conclusion of the bout. Burns was wobbly from that point forward, though he still persisted in seeking by infighting and near clinches to get the essential smash.

At the end of the eighth round he consulted with the referee, Jack Crawford of Merrill, and then announced that he could not stand the pressure any longer, and expressed his sorrow to the audience. The crowd cheered.

Young Jack Johnson accepted a challenge from Frank Mantell, the champion welterweight of the world. Jack Linkenback referred the preliminaries and Dave Burling was the announcer. Dick Donnelly was the chief aide of both the Anderson boys, in the preliminaries Slick Wilson was in the other corner.

Court Hears Demurrer

The only business in circuit court Wednesday was the hearing by Judge Benson of argument on a demurrer in the case of S. H. Griffith against the Water Users Association. It was a demurrer founded on the assertion that a complaint was not fully specified.
