MERRILL WIPES DIAMOND WITH KLAMATH FALLS

Some times, said Sam Crane, the dean of baseball writers, the best team fails to win. The word "sometimes" make the needful reservation, but there could be no application of that doctrine, so far as the result of the game Sunday was concerned.

The visiting Merrill team vanquished the Klamath Falls outfit in the first Springs Modoc Park diamond in merciless fashion, the score at the conclusion of the fray being 10 to 3 against the home boys.

Pitcher Blodgett of Merrill, who, by the way, is a mere youth, was the hero of the game, and showed a superior standard of work that is a foreboding that he will achieve greater successes in the future.

On the Klamath Falls side Dolliver, as catcher, made some fine throws to second base, putting his men out every time. Arnold for the local aggregation, made three grand stand plays, catching three flies in left field. Webb, as pitcher, was a complete disappointment to local fandom. He was defective right through. Merrill hit him whenever they desired to do so, and that was good and often.

Jim Newnam of Klamath Falls, was a good man at first, and also at bat, and helped in a measurable degree to save what looked like an ignominious defeat for the Klamath Falls boys.

Capron, who was assigned to left field for the locals, was unable to be present, and this proved a great defect, for he is a past master of all the tricks of the diamond.

McKuhn, on second base, did remarkably well, but the individual excellence of the home force could not size up against the excellent team work of the visitors. At the bat Klamath Falls was extremely weak, while Merrill was decidedly strong. Montgomery was umpire.

PEOPLE YOU OUGHT TO KNOW THE SHERIFF MEETS A GREEN ONE

With court in session, Sheriff Barnes is the busiest man in town. Not but that the sheriff has enough work to keep him going right along, but the opening of court is always the signal for additional work.

True, the detail work preceding a term of court requires considerable of the sheriff's time, and his experiences then are calculated to wear fringes on an ordinarily even temper.

A few days ago the sheriff returned from a trip out in the country serving papers. Among others, he had a subpoena for a rancher who lives in one of the most isolated parts of the country. The rancher was not at home on the first visit of the officer, but the second visit was more satisfactory.

"Want to see me, you say?" queried the rancher.

"Yes, I have a subpoena for you," replied the sheriff, handing over a legal document.

"What's it for?"

"It means that you are to come into town next week."

"What town?"

"Klamath Falls: the county seat."

"County seat?" The rancher was plainly puzzled.

"County seat? That's the first time I knew this county had a seat."

But he's in town today, and says he likes it.

Bones—Say, Mister Interlocutor, what wuz de cause ob all de excitement on de streets las' night?

Interlocutor—Excitement? Why, I saw no signs of any excitement on the streets last night.

Bones—Dey wuz. De police force wuz out on dress parade.

Interlocutor—Police force out on dress parade? Surely you must have been mistaken. There was no occasion for the police force being out on dress parade last night. It was Sunday.

Bones—Dey wuz, dough. I saw Chief Smith walkin' down Main street wid Officer Hall and Officer Sharpe.

Interlocutor—Mister Tambo, have you heard anything new lately?

Tambo—Yes, sah. I was in Keller's restauraw, yisterday, an' a little boy came in. Hah, hah!

Interlocutor—I see nothing funny in the fact that a little boy went into a restaurant yesterday.

Tambo—Well, sah, dis heah little boy said dat he wuz hungry and axed de waitah to bring him somethin' to eat.

Interlocutor—Yes?

Tambo—Den de waitah brought him some soup.

Interlocutor—Well?

Tambo—De little boy, he jes' sat der, but didn't eat. Hah, hah!

Interlocutor—Well?

Tambo—De waitah said: "I thought you wuz hungry. Why don't you eat dat soup?" Hah, hah!

Interlocutor—Go on.

Tambo—De little boy said: "I'se hungry, but Ah ain't thirsty."

Bones—You know Jim?

Interlocutor—Yes, I know Jim very well indeed.

Bones—Well, sah, Jim ain't going to drink no moh.

Interlocutor—I am pleased to hear it. He has been drinking very heavy lately.

Bones—Yes, sah; an' I fixed it so he don't want booze no moh.

Interlocutor—How did you accomplish this miracle?

Bones—I took Jim out walkin' yesterday. We started along Conger avenue, me talkin' prohibition to Jim all de time. Then we steered off to de left on dat trail dat goes to Wilson's Island. Ah says to Jim: "You all wants to cut out dat booze. You all sure to see snakes of you don't." An' Jim sure did see 'em. Dey wuz out in full force yisterday. I's a powerful fast runner, but Jim beat me back to town so fer dat you'd thought I wuz standin' still, instead of runnin' my best. Den he took de plodge.
