SOLICITOR AND EDITOR MISSING

DOLMAN AND MIKEL FAIL TO RETURN WITH AUTO BOAT

It is Entertained That They Have Been Lost in One of the Many Shoals of South Lake—Searching Party Fails to Locate Them. Editor-in-Chief of Northwesters is on Lookout

Maxton Dolman of the editorial force of the Klamath Falls Northwesters, and Rossiter Mikel, advertising solicitor for the same publication, have been missing since yesterday morning, when they started in one of Telford & Son's launches for a pleasure trip on Lower Lake Klamath.

This morning Samuel M. Evans, editor, and R. Vance Hutchins, reporter of the Northwesters, went with Ray Telford in a launch to search for the missing men. After they had been gone some hours Telford telephoned to his father that no trace had been found of the missing men, but that the searching party had sighted smoke, apparently in the upper end of the Floating Tule Islands, and believed that it might have been started by Dolman and Mikel. The theory of Telford was that when the men went through the strait, expecting to strike the channel for the main body of the Lower Lake, they mistakenly entered one of the many false, tule-grown channels which lead to the islands, which would naturally throw them far off their course.

The message from Ray Telford came from Midland, and he stated that the hunt would be continued by trying to locate the fire, where it was hoped the missing men would be.
