Stock Growers to Auction off Cattle

Scarcity of Beef May Result in the Adoption of Plan Used by Wool Growers. Buyers in City

Auction sales of cattle in this vicinity may be the outcome of the condition of the cattle market, according to Fred McKendree, who has an alfalfa ranch about 3 1/2 miles this side of Merrill. Mr. McKendree was in the city this morning.

It appears that owing to the scarcity of cattle this season, the wool growers are planning to hold their herds and have sales from the block, as has been practiced in other cattle markets of the West. In the wool business the auction sales have become the practice, instead of the opposite.

It is asserted that by getting the cattle together and selling at auction the sellers can command a higher price than if they were to hold
