ANCIENT LAW SUIT SETTLED

OWNERSHIP OF MAGNIFICENT PALACE OF LA ALHAMBRA IS DECIDED AFTER 100 YEARS OF LITIGATION

MADRID, Oct. 1.—An important law suit, which has lasted 100 years, was just decided at Granada. It concerns nothing less than the ownership rights of El Generalife and the magnificent palace of La Alhambra, surrounded by the beautiful gardens, which was once the palace of summer retirement of the Moorish sovereigns during the Moslem occupation.

Over 100 years ago the mayor of Granada, Senor Grimaldi, gave the wrongful possession of this property to the ancestors of the present Marquis of Campotejar. The present action was commenced nearly a century ago with the object of obliging those persons to return the property to the state. A decision has been pronounced by the Salvador high court, declaring that El Generalife and the Alhambra belong to the royal family, and ordering their immediate return to the state.

The decision also calls upon the Marquis of Campotejar to pay the entire value of the fruit grown on the property from the time when Senor Grimaldi handed over the lands to his ancestors, and also to pay the costs of the action during the century.

MANY FISH ARE PUT IN STREAMS

REPORT OF THE STATE GAME WARDEN IS READ AT A MEETING OF MULTNOMAH ANGLERS CLUB IN PORTLAND

Over 2,000,000 trout were distributed in the various streams of the state during the past year, according to the report of W. L. Finley, which was read in Portland the other day at the monthly meeting of the Multnomah Anglers' Club.

The exact number of trout planted is 2,173,250. Of this number 13,652 died in being transported to the various streams. The rainbow and steelhead were the ones that could not stand such jarring. Ten thousand of these died, while only 2,500 of the Eastern brooks died.

The club adopted a bill and will endeavor to have it presented at the next session of the state legislature. The bill, if passed, will allow Oregon fishermen to secure a license in the state of Washington, and vice versa.

A movement was started to secure new members for the club. The member securing the largest number of new ones will be presented with an order for $15 worth of fishing tackle. The second prize will be a $10 order and the third prize a $5 order.

The club has 250 members at present, and is anxious to bring its membership total to 1,000 by the next annual meeting, which will be held in January.

C. T. BONNEY DIES AT HOME IN SOUTH

Word has been received here from Phoenix, Ariz., of the death of Charles Truman Bonney, who practiced law here for four years. The following is from a Phoenix paper:

Charles Truman Bonney, who died here on April 6th, was born in Woodburn, Ore., June 28, 1859, where he lived the first eighteen years of his life. From there he went to Eastern Oregon, where with his brother, Gus, he was engaged in the livestock business for twelve years. He was a stock inspector of Wasco county for several years, and took an active part in politics, and while there began to study law. From there he returned to the Willamette Valley, where he engaged in onion growing for several years, in the meantime resuming his law studies, graduating with first honors at the Oregon law school at Salem, Ore. He was admitted to the Oregon bar, and began his law practice in Woodburn, Ore.

In 1905 he moved to Klamath Falls, Ore. After practicing law there for four years, he came to Arizona at attorney for the Harqua Hala Development company. Mr. Bonney never applied for admission to the Arizona bar. For about two years before his death he worked at the carpenter trade, and was a member of the local union.

The deceased was possessed of marked ability, and many of his poems, hymns and other writings were published in the leading magazines. He also delivered many speeches and lectures, and for years edited departments in several Northwest publications. He was for eighteen years a member of the Methodist church, and was also a member of the Masonic order.

Mr. Bonney stood high in his own community in Oregon, and he came to Phoenix with recommendations from the most prominent men in his state. He is mourned by his wife, one son and three daughters.

Mix 'n' Up
By Joe Bush

Twenty years ago Judge Henry L. Benson was district attorney for four counties in Southern Oregon. He was called to Lakeview to attend a grand jury session, and at the conclusion of the investigation, handed two indictments to the inquisitorial body. Both charged making away with livestock.

It seems that some time before a cow puncher had arrived in Lakeview and had proceeded to stir things up, using the alcoholic route. He spent all of his loose change, and then sold his saddle and bridle. Having consumed the returns from this part of his equipment, he sold his horse, and it was not long until he was broke again. Then he tried to sell his six-shooter, but no one would advance him any money on it. Every effort on his part to get a drink with his weapon as security was without avail. The drink dispensers realized that the cow man was on the verge of seeing animals on the wall paper, and refused to be a party to any such an entertainment.

Finally he called on a local butcher. "How much'll you give for a nice fat yearling steer, all dressed?" he asked.

"Ten dollars," replied the butcher. Forthwith the cow man started toward the range, then but a short distance from the heart of Lakeview.

But the suspicions of the butcher had been aroused and he notified the officers. The result was that the cow man was trailed to a point about a mile out of town, where he killed a fat young steer and was engaged in dressing the carcass when the officers arrested him.

One of the two indictments drawn up by the then young attorney was against this man.

The other charged a prominent and wealthy rancher of the section with doing practically the same thing. The evidence was equally positive in both cases, and the young attorney was naturally surprised when he ascertained that but one of the indictments—that against the cow puncher—had been returned to the court.

The young attorney hurried to the grand jury.

"I thought I gave you two indictments," he said.

"But you only returned one to the court!"

"Yap."

"Well, what did you do with the other?"

"Stuck it in the stove."

"What did you do that for?"

"Now you look here, young fellow, that onery cow puncher ain't got airy a hoof on this range, and what's he comin' around here and killin' beef for? With Bill Jones it's different. He's got quite a bunch here, and we don't need no law on him. We can hold our own with him."

And it seems they did, for Bill Jones' herd subsequently was considerably diminished, although he escaped a grand jury indictment.
