SOCIAL HAPPENINGS OF WEEK

ing the holidays, but unexpected circumstances have recalled them to Portland before their contemplated return.

Decidedly novel is the "watch party" to be given by the Epworth League at Grace M. E. Church New Years' Eve. In view of the fact that that will be the last day of leap year, and the young ladies will have no opportunity to vote their matrimonial proposals for four years, the entertainment will be a "Last Chance" party. Several of the young men are being strongly urged to attend the social, from which it appears that a number of the fairer sex are not going to chance a lapse of four years before they can rightfully whisper sweet nothings.

Order of the Eastern Star, installed officers at Masonic Hall Tuesday evening, the following corps of officers being properly installed:

Worthy Matron, Mrs. E. B. Henry; Patron, Mr. John Hillhouse; Associate Matron, Miss Maude Baldwin; Secretary, Mrs. Jessie Momyer; Treasurer, Mrs. Frank McMillan; Conductress, Mrs. Charles J. Martin; Associate Conductress, Mrs. Maude Cox; Ada, Mrs. George Chastain; Ruth, Mrs. Van Riper; Esther, Mrs. L. O. Mills; Martha, Mrs. Geo. Hurn; Electa, Mrs. Fink; Warden, Mrs. John Hillhouse; Sentinel, Mr. L. O. Mills; Organist, Mrs. Oscar Salve; Marshal, Mrs. Frank Ahney.

Mrs. E. V. Morrow (the youngest "imp" of the household) . . . Mrs. Geo. Capron Angelica Damask (the eldest) . . . Mrs. E. V. Morrow Susan (the braviest) . . . Mrs. Charles L. Robertson Arthur J. Hay had a difficult role in which to win applause, but he acted the part true to life, and added much to the humor of the play. Another well played role was the irascible father as portrayed by H. D. Kinnear, and Jerry Darrell was at home in the role of the "blood and thunder" character.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McMillan and Joseph McMillan's party showed the two popular young men at a disadvantage. Mrs. Mary Jackson proved herself to be a capable actress by her interpretation of the part assigned to her, and Mrs. Robertson played one of the best character roles that has ever been given in local theatrical circles. She lost no opportunity to get everything possible out of the part. Mrs. George Capron and Mrs. E. V. Morrow were good in juvenile roles. "Under the Pretal Branch," a Dutch oddity, was sung by Dr. E. V. Morrow between the first and second act, and specialties were also introduced by Reynolds and Elliott, singing, glee and musical, and Mrs. Morrow, Miss Margaret Williams, Lawrence Mohaffey and Joseph McMillan in a barn dance.

The members of the two Pythian orders have long been noted in Klamath Falls as royal entertainers, and this was proven again Wednesday night, when Klamath Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and Cananda Temple, Pythian Sisters, met in joint session. Cards and dancing were enjoyed till a late hour, and an elaborate chicken supper was served.

"A Night Off," a four act comedy was presented at Houston's opera house by local talent last night under the auspices of the Civic League, and considering the few possibilities afforded for action in the production, the local Theatians handled their roles exceptionally well. The cast of characters follows:
