GAME WARDEN SEEKING QUAIL

WANTS TO STOCK THIS STATE WITH THE "BOB WHITE" VARIETY, BUT HAS TROUBLE IN SECURING A SUPPLY

Several attempts have been made by the state game warden, William L. Finley, to buy Bob White quail in the Eastern states for liberating in certain parts of Oregon. The Bob White is a very desirable bird, however, and other states are guarding carefully the supply they now have. Some sections of Oregon are already pretty fairly stocked with Bob White quail. Other sections are stocked with California and Mountain quail.

"We can stock almost all parts of our state with these different varieties of quail," said Mr. Finley, "if we can secure reliable parties to trap the birds and ship them under our directions. We are anxious to get in touch with anyone who is in position to trap quail. We are willing to pay for the birds, and shall arrange to have them sent either to the state game farm at Corvallis, or direct to the places where we want to liberate them."

In parts of the Willamette Valley and in sections of Eastern Oregon Bob White quail are quite abundant. These birds will thrive well in Southern Oregon, and the people in that part of the country are anxious to have them introduced. In Southern Oregon the California or Valley quail are abundant, and yet we have none of these birds in the Willamette Valley, although they would thrive here and make a splendid addition to our supply of game birds.

Both the California quail and the Bob White quail are insect and weed seed eaters. They are not only excellent game birds, but are most valuable birds from the economic standpoint about any farming community. It is strictly against the law to trap any game birds in the state of Oregon, yet the state game warden can by special permit grant this privilege for scientific and propagation purposes.

MEN GIVEN TERMS IN PRISON

ment had been denied Judge Anderson asked if any of the defendants wished to speak in his own behalf. There was a silence, and not one of the defendants rose to his feet. The judge repeated his query, but there was still silence. Then the court questioned Farrell, Cooney, Murphy and Kline.

Bernhardt then appealed for the leniency of the court, and said: "I hope God strikes me dead if I am guilty."

The court then passed sentence on the defendants.

After sentence had been passed the prisoners were taken to a temporary dining room on the fourth floor of the federal building. There they partook of a farewell dinner with their wives and relatives.

At the entrance to the dining room the manacles were removed from the wrists of the prisoners, and they were permitted to walk to their seats unaccompanied by guards. The only indication that they were being guarded was the row of special officers around the four walls.

United States Marshal Schmidt stated that he will take the prisoners to Leavenworth tonight or tomorrow in a special train over the Pennsylvania road.

Court opened at 10 o'clock. The prisoners were marched through the streets, each manacled to a deputy United States marshal.

Judge Anderson denied motions for a new trial and a stay of judgment. Farrell was questioned to a considerable length. Judge Anderson said that if Farrell had posed the dynamite he deserved consideration.

"He is one of the least guilty," said District Attorney Miller, "and I would certainly have moved for his discharge had the defense presented a better fight for him."

"I will never sentence a man I believe not guilty, regardless of the verdict," said Judge Anderson.

Farrell then sat down.

The fact that the court helped to bring out a point favorable to a prisoner awaiting sentence encouraged the other prisoners.

MANDAMUS CASE RECEIVES JOLT

different races, and such action has in a majority of cases been upheld by the courts.

"It is true that the alternative writ in this case alleges that the directors of District No. 7 have rented a small room and employed a teacher for three months, and that plaintiff's children would not have the same advantages there that would be theirs in the other school, but this is a mere conclusion, and not an allegation of fact. There is no suggestion of sanitary defects, there is no hint of lack of equipment, there is no allegation of lack of qualified teachers. The only thing that aunts toward a defect is the allegation that the teacher is employed for three months only, but of this, the plaintiff cannot complain, for if the school for white children is still in session when the separate school is ended the board of directors cannot refuse plaintiff's children admission to the school which is continuing in session.

"It follows that the demurrer must be sustained."

Crawford and his wife, according to the petition for a writ of mandamus filed by their attorney C. M. O'Neill, are of mixed blood, both having an Indian mother and a white father. The petition also alleges that for the past three or four years, they have resided at Fort Klamath, and are paying taxes on property there.

For the past two years, they state, their children have received instruction at the local school, but this year, when they applied for enrollment they were refused admission, and were sent home. Later the directors rented a separate room some distance from the school, and hired a teacher for three months to instruct the children of Indian lineage.

Crawford holds that his children are discriminated against, and that they will be given instruction for only three months at this school, and he sought an order to compel the directors to enroll his children at the white children's school.

The demurrer was filed by Thomas Drake and Kuykendall and Ferguson.

RUCKER'S CASE MAY BE PROBED

side hotel in Merrill for several months while he was buying horses in that vicinity. Friday afternoon, feeling ill, he went to his room on the second floor of the hotel to lie down. He slept until 8:30 that evening, and when he started downstairs he tripped on the top step and fell to the bottom of the flight.

According to a Merrill resident, Rucker's death was due to heart failure, following a protracted period of inebriation. He states that the body was held awaiting the arrival of the dead man's relatives until the town authorities ordered it buried.

"Rucker was addicted to the use of intoxicants, and it has been known in Merrill that his heart was weakened as a result," said the Merrill man. "At the time Rucker fell down the steps a doctor was summoned, but he was not found to be injured as a result of the fall. He was removed to his room, and went to sleep, and he died early the following morning."

"As soon as possible Rucker's relatives were communicated with regarding his death, and they wired that they would arrive at once. Believing the relatives would arrive sooner than they did, we believed the remains would keep until their arrival, as Merrill has no embalmer. The relatives did not arrive Sunday morning, as we expected, not reaching Klamath Falls until last night."

"In the meantime decomposition set in. By Sunday evening this had become noticeable, and the authorities ordered the body buried. The remains were interred in accordance with this request."

Star Show Pleases

Wolf and Weichert in their laughable Dutch comedy, "The Janitor and the Actress," are making a big hit at the Star theater this week, and they introduce good singing and clever comedy. "On Secret Service," one of the best two-reel feature films of the year is also being shown, and the program includes in addition three comedy reels.

PARIS, Dec. 30.—Insurance against the birth of twins is the latest actuarial problem confronting insurance companies. Recently a woman who was expecting a visit from the stork walked into a leading insurance company's office and asked the rate for insurance against twins. The officials admitted that they had not thought it out, but finally decided that $13.50 a month for a six months $2,000 policy was about the figure. Twin daughters have just arrived, and the company has paid up, plus a box of sweets added by the genial manager.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Though separated from her husband by a distance of nearly 12,000 miles, Dr. Alice Burn has convinced the British courts that she is a "married woman residing with her husband," and as such is exempt from payment of income tax. The income tax commissioners pointed out that Dr. Alice came to England from New Zealand, alone, some seven or eight years ago, to study medicine, but she successfully pleaded that the separation was merely a geographical one, and could have no legal consequence.
