SEEK COMMERCIAL USES OF SAWDUST

STATE UNIVERSITY STUDENTS WORKING TO FIND METHODS FOR USING WASTE PRODUCT OF LUMBER INDUSTRY

EUGENE, Jan. 15.—The engineering department in constructing a huge iron retort with which two university chemistry professors hope to devise a method of utilizing the wood waste from sawmills, stumps and slashings to a commercial advantage.

Professor O. F. Stafford of the department of chemistry and Assistant Professor A. F. Shinn have been working all fall upon this project. A model has been constructed upon a small scale, and the operations successfully conducted, and now, to assure that it will be a commercial success a full sized apparatus is under construction.

The wood waste—sawdust, chips and slabs—is converted by distillation into such products as alcohol, acetic acid, tar, charcoal and a score of other wood byproducts. Such may readily be obtained by destructive distillation of wood, but as yet no process has been devised to do so upon a commercially successful basis.

"Many efforts have been made to do this," declared Professor Stafford, "but we feel that we have found a slight variation in the process which will mark the difference between com-mercially unprofitable and successful operation. It will, however, be two months or more before we will know the results of our experiments."

The distillation is done by a rotary retort, in which the process is continuous. Other such distillation plants have been intermittent, it being necessary to charge, then remove the products after distillation and recharge.

Grant Gay, managing one of Howard Van Valkenburg's large stock ranches in the Keno section, was in the city Tuesday on business. Mr.
Gay also attended the Woodmen of the World installation and banquet last evening.

Mrs. Will Weedon is on the road to recovery, following a siege of influenza.

Dancer To Wed Lord

The wedding of pretty Olive May,

one of the cleverest dancers in London, to Lord Victor William Paget, brother of and heir presumptive to the Marquis of Anglesey, is announced for the early part of the year. Miss May is one of the most popular of the Gaiety girls, and by her marriage to Lord Paget, she will be allied to the Duke of Rutland's family, through the newly married Marchioness of Anglesey, who was Lady Marjorie Manners, daughter of the duke. English people now refer to the Gaiety stage as the marriage market for British aristocracy.

SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE TO LIVESTOCK PUBLICATION SAYS
ENTIRE STATE IS WATCHING THE PROGRESS MADE HERE

"This section cannot give too much attention to dairying," says D. O.
Anderson, special representative of the Western Stock Journal, who has been here for the past week, looking over the county. "There is perhaps no other place in the state where conditions are so favorable for this line of agricultural pursuit, but it has been badly neglected in Klamath.

"The movement on the part of Mr.
McCoy and other residents to improve the dairy herds is one of great merit, and it is receiving commendation all over the state. There is only one way to make a successful start in the dairy business, and that is by purchasing good stock at the start."

Mr. Anderson has visited several parts of the county during the past week. Tomorrow he goes to Fort Klamath for a short visit.

A. A. Mitchell, a well known traveling salesman, is here in the interests of "M. J. B."
