MEXICANS RUSTLE STOCK IN TEXAS; RANGERS PURSUE ARMED PARTY ACROSS BORDER AND PILLAGES

United Press Service EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 18.—Heavily armed, a party of Mexicans crossed the border near West Alpine, and raided a number of ranches, taking all the available horses and supplies. After Many Similar Reports, Confirmation Comes. Body will be Cremated Tomorrow and Ashes Scattered to the Four Winds. Death Mask Made

United Press Service OAKLAND, Feb. 18.—Joaquin Miller, "The poet of the Sierras," is dead. Before reports have been sent out to the effect that the grand old man was dead, but later these reports were disapproved. Now there seems to be no doubt of the truth of the announcement, and messages of sympathy are pouring in from all over the world to the widow of the poet. The body will be cremated tomorrow. Later the ceremony of scattering the ashes will be held. Memorial services will be held a fortnight from today at the Miller homestead in the Sierras. Mrs. Miller has announced that she will reside in Saratoga, N. Y. A death mask was made today by Rupert Smith, a San Francisco sculptor. Great crowds are viewing the remains of the deceased poet. Cincinnati's Heine Miller was born in the Wabash district of Indiana on November 10, 1841. The name of "Joaquin" was bestowed on him for his strenuous defense of the Mexican bandit, Joaquin Murrieta. With his father he came to Oregon in 1854, where after a short school life he ran away from home and went to the California gold mines. He accompanied Walker on his filibustering expedition to Nicaragua, and also spent several years with the Indians of the Pacific slope. For a short time he was editor of the Eugene (Ore.) Democrat, which was suppressed in 1883 because of its treasonable character.

He graduated from the Columbia. He studied law, and graduated from the Columbia College in Oregon. In 1864 he began to practice law in Canyon City, Ore., where he made himself very popular for his services against the warlike Snake Indians, and from 1866 to 1870 was judge of Grant county. His writings collected under the title of "Songs of the Sierras," he could not sell in the East, and so took them to London, where they were published, and brought him great fame. His most notable works in verse include: "Songs of the Sierras," "Songs of the Desert" and "Songs of Italy." His most notable prose works are: "The Baroness of New York," "The Danites in the Sierras" and "49, or the Gold-Seekers of the Sierras."
