FEMALE SLEUTNS NOT SUCCESSFUL

A FAMOUS BRITISH DETECTIVE SAYS CLEVEREST WOMAN IS NOT EQUAL TO THE MAN OF ORDINARY ABILITY

LONDON, March 22.—The ever-increasing interest as to woman's proper sphere in business life continues to find fruitful ground for argument in the assertion that women make better detectives than men. Inspector John Sweeney, one of the greatest detectives ever connected with Scotland Yard, who tracked famous criminals, great anarchists and guarded crowned heads and priceless jewels with unvarying success, was asked what he thought about it.

"In my experience of thirty-eight years," said Sweeney, "I have worked with hundreds of men and a great many women in unraveling cases, and I never found that the cleverest woman has been equal to a man of ordinary ability. A man invariably pays more attention to his work than a woman, apart from the fact that he usually knows more about it. Women are so frequently thinking about something else—whether their hair is parted straight and whether their hat is at the right angle, or whether their friend will turn up in time for the theater. I know no detective agencies whose opinions are divided as to the relative value of women and men as private investigators. A woman could never take up a case and carry it through in her own way—that is, do the necessary inquiries, observation and following on long journeys. On each occasion when I have engaged a lady detective to follow on long journeys she has always missed her quarry and returned home dejected and crestfallen. Then if she were asked to take up another case at once she would respectfully decline, advancing the excuse that she must have a rest before commencing again. On the other hand, a man would be only too pleased to start at once and put his best foot forward, and make sure that he did not miss his quarry again."

If it's worth having, it's worth insuring. See Chilcote, 622 Main St. Phone 68.

AMERICAN WOMAN WRITES OF CONDITIONS IN CONSTANTINOPLE—DECLARES THAT MASSACRE WAS THREATENED

United Press Service
MILWAUKEE, March 22.—Mrs. John Alton, wife of an American engineer living in Constantinople, in a letter to a relative here, declares that only the presence of four British gunboats anchored in The Dardanelles prevented a massacre of Christians.
"Things grew steadily worse," she writes. "There was much talk of a massacre. The Arabs say they were promised much loot if they enlisted. Since then the officers restrained them with great difficulty. All night the British warships swept the city with searchlights. They were on the lookout for trouble at any hour. Food supplies are at the lowest."

WEEKLY SERMON

The Easter Lesson

By Dr. Kvam.

There are many resurrections. Every night the sun goes down and is hidden from our sight as if buried in a grave, but we say it will rise again, and if we get up very early we watch the dawn; see the first pale fingers of light steal across the darkness. Then, one by one, the things buried in darkness spring out of it; the sky becomes filled with a pageant of glorious colors and then up comes the great Sun, and the whole world seems to break into praise for another resurrection.

At this time of the year it seems as if nature is all rising out of the death of winter into the new, beautiful life of spring. The snow that has been spread like a winding sheet over the fields and hill sides is drawn up by the sun, and does not show us a cold, dreary, dead earth, but one rising into all the new life of leaf and bud and blossom.

Then each buried seed has its own resurrection. We have taken in our hands the little dead looking thing, and as we looked at it we know that the poor, insignificant looking little body the seed has is not its own body, but that somehow, hidden in it, is a glorious body with a stem and leaves and exquisite flowers and delicious fruit. We are so sure that it has this body, which no microscope can see, that we gladly bury the little dead-looking seed and watch its grave. Presently, down in the dark, that wonderful new body begins to unfold itself and push its way up to the light, and by and by there it is, a glorious, perfect plant. Here has been a wonderful resurrection.

Some of us have found a little soft bodied worm or caterpillar, as we call it, and have watched it from day to day until we have seen it begin to spin out of its body a tiny thread, and wind it round and round itself until it is entirely covered with a real winding sheet. If we open this we find the caterpillar has changed to a dead looking thing without head or feet or wings or eyes, but if we leave it, by and by the body we could not see, and no scientist with his microscope could have found, begins to unfold. Soon it tears away the shroud and comes forth a beautiful thing with

SAGE TEA BEAUTIFULLY DARKENS THE HAIR WHEN FADED AND GRAY

Mixed With Sulphur, Makes the Hair Soft, Lustrous and Cures Dandruff

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But the brewing at home is messy and out of date. Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drugstore for the ready-to-use product, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, which is usually too sticky, so insist upon getting Wyeth's, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair, and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well known downtown druggist says his customers insist of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because, they say, it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.
