Raising 20,000 Sacks of Potatoes on Ranch

Japanese Colonists Have Immense Crop of Tubers—Will Have a Special Warehouse Here

Twenty thousand sacks of potatoes raised on one ranch is evidence that not everybody is afraid of bottom prices in tubers this year. This is the estimated yield of the portion of the Grigsby ranch which is being farmed by a Japanese colony.

The colonists, whose numbers include several agricultural experts, has planted 265 acres to potatoes. A conservative estimate of the crop is placed at 20,000 sacks.

With the approach of fall, the Japanese are making preparations for the marketing of the potato crop. It is their intention to build or have built, a warehouse, where the potatoes can be held in storage for quick shipment.

The colony is arranging for the transportation of the tubers from the ranch to a warehouse here. They expect to close a contract with some concern for hauling 500 sacks of potatoes daily to the city.

At this rate, it will take more than a month to haul the potatoes here to await shipment.

September 1, the same as Montana and Idaho. Your birds are old enough by that time to take care of themselves."

The timely warning of Mr. Upson is to be taken advantage of by the Klamath Sportsmen's Association. A meeting of the directors will be called in a few days, at which time a form of protest will be drawn up to be forwarded to Washington.
