CORONER'S JURY FIXES NO BLAME

INVESTIGATION OF MERRILL TRAGEDY RESULTS IN A VERDICT TO THE EFFECT THAT MERRILL WAS ACCIDENT

That the automobile accident near Merrill Sunday morning, resulting in the death of Gertrude Stearns was purely accidental, and that no blame can be attached to anybody, was the finding of the coroner's jury at the inquest held there late Monday afternoon by Coroner Earl Whitlock.

The funeral of the young woman was held this morning at Merrill. The remains were interred in the Mt. Laki cemetery.

control until March 5th last. He is 27 years old.

Diggs and Caminetti have long been intimate friends. Both are married and have families.

Under the names of Fisher and Whitman, it is alleged that Diggs and Caminetti began to court the Norris and Warrington girls last winter. Finally things went so far that when the real identity of the men was discovered by the girls the relations of the four did not break off. It was after this that the plan to leave the city began to take shape—the journey that was to land the two couples in the federal net under the white slave law.

Once upon the train, the girls gave themselves up to the plans for the elopement and ceased to rebel. The four traveled in one stateroom. On arrival at Reno, Nev., in early morning the party went to a hotel. Four days later the two couples were arrested living together in a bungalow at Reno.

Novelty Coming.—A thousand dollar prize from a daily paper possessing a national circulation is a big thing. It is also a big achievement to be awarded such a tidy sum for the writing of a one-act comedy that subsequently proved to be as big as the biggest dramatic successes with a dozen or more characters, three or four acts and two hours or more to tell the story. Nevertheless this achievement was accomplished several years ago in the writing and production of "Chums," which is to be the opening play introducing the Modern Theater company at the Star theater Thursday evening.

New Ventilating System.—Electricians are at work this afternoon installing a cooling system in the Idle Hour cigar store, which, when completed, will change the air in the entire building every fourteen minutes. This will be accomplished by means of automatic fans driving the air both ways from the center of the building.

NEARLY 40,000 NEW DAIRY COWS

OREGON LEADS PACIFIC NORTHWEST IN IMPORTATION—THE GROWTH OF THIS INDUSTRY HAS BEEN ENORMOUS

PORTLAND, Aug. 5.—The growth of the dairy industry in the Pacific Northwest during the last few years has been extraordinary. According to George Mokel, considered one of the greatest authorities on cows in this section 38,855 cows were brought into the states of Oregon, Idaho and Washington during the last year. Of this amount importations into Oregon during the year were 17,050 head, Washington 10,780, and Idaho 11,025. Of the total amount in the three states, Mr. Mokel alone brought forward 7,605 head, which he distributed among the various interests.

The market for dairy cows is strong. Considering the extreme tightness of the money market the situation is unusually favorable. There is a great demand for cows, but on account of the money situation producers are unable to secure the funds.

There has been an appreciable improvement in the quality of the arrivals. Holsteins have been in greatest demand, and it is safe to say that 90 per cent of the arrivals were of this variety. The reason for this is apparent when it is shown that the average milking of a Holstein is six gallons, compared with 3½ gallons for a Jersey.

There is a wide difference in cows, just as in other lines. Some complaint is made by producers of the price they are asked for first class dairy stuff. Generally speaking they compare beef cows with dairy cows, and this is scarcely fair. The average beef cow gives from 1½ to three gallons of milk each day, while good dairy cows milk from five to eight gallons each. Cows for beef have recently sold at the market from $65 to $80 each, therefore the difference in price is somewhat less than many had believed.

The last year has amply demonstrated that dairying is the industry that will bring Klamath to the front. Only a few years ago there was not a single creamery in operation in entire Klamath county. At present three of these institutions are being operated, and they are exporting butter to the amount of approximately $7,000 every month.

During the year more than 300 head of dairy cows have been shipped into the Klamath Basin. These cows have been bought by farmers who have heretofore raised hay and grain and sold the crude product.

CITY HALL, FIRE, GARBAGE BONDS

and issue the bonds of said city for any specific municipal purpose.

The proceeding taken with reference to the issuance of said bonds were all under the charter of May 21, 1910. However, the bonds remaining unsold during the life of said charter, it is now proposed to sell same. I am not informed as to whether the city officials are relying upon the old charter for the issuance of said bonds now, or whether they are relying upon the present charter.

In my opinion there is a serious question as to whether said bonds can be lawfully issued under either of said charters. There is nothing in the new charter which specifically perpetuates the authority to issue the bonds in question. On the contrary, the new charter contains specific provisions as to the procedure and to the issuance and sale of bonds for such purposes, and provides that in the notice of sale thereof it shall be stated that the bonds are issued and disposed of under this charter.

The notice of sale as submitted with the transcript fails to comply with this requirement for the very apparent reason that the bonds are not in fact being issued and disposed of under the new charter.

The council last night discussed the matter, and it is probable that a special election will be held in a short time to vote on the issuance of the bonds. In that case, the issues would be legalized, as the company desires.

This is the bonding house which was awarded the $76,793 refunding bond issue. As this was under the new charter, the house states that they expect to find the issue satisfactory in every way.
