

If You MUST Suicide, Leave Bichloride Out

United Press Service
DENVER, Colo., Aug. 18.—"I should advise anyone seeking a flower strewn path to the great beyond to leave bichloride of mercury alone. I can conceive of no more horrible death than from the effects of bichloride."

Dr. L. M. Van Mater, prominent Denver physician today issued this warning to "would-be suicides" through the United Press. In doing so he admitted that the increase in the number of persons taking this means of ending their lives is giving medical men all over the country much concern. The use of bichloride, said Dr. Van Mater, has alarmingly increased, following the death of G. Sanders Walker, millionaire banker, of Macon, Ga., who took the poison by mistake, and lived for several days afterwards with full knowledge of his approaching end.

"It is an erroneous opinion that death by bichloride is painless," said Dr. Van Mater today. "Violent pains follow the spreading of the poison through the system. It is a corrosive poisoning, and naturally it is highly irritant. There is no known antidote after the poison has had a fair start, except albumen—usually the white of an egg—which surrounds and holds inactive the poison, if it is given soon enough and the quantity of the poison taken is not too large.

"The reason that there is no means of coping with this terrible poison after it has left the stomach is that the mercury dissolves and permeates the system so rapidly. In action it is very much like arsenic, but far more painful. The effect of mercurial bichloride is much similar in some respects to the effects of an overdose of calomel. In some cases the teeth are loosened, the sufferer undergoes violent paroxysms of pain, vomiting spells and convulsions.

"How the idea got abroad that bichloride of mercury poisoning was painless is hard to say. If one or two men have stoically borne the anguish that does not mean that others can do likewise. A person who can stand the terrible pains of bichloride mercury poisoning stoically cannot have human feelings."

William Ziegler, Jr. Has a Lot of Pretty Girls in His Musical Comedy

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Some one has surrounded William Ziegler Jr., 23 years old, and heir to $40,000,000 of baking powder, with many pretty girls in the new musical comedy company, "Adele," which he is backing. When it was discovered that he was a stockholder in the New Era company, which is putting on the piece, the inference was drawn that he had picked the girls. He and his friends deny this. They insist the girls were selected by a professional stage director and manager.

Nor will his friends say whether or not he is going into the theatrical business on a larger scale. When some one called him merely an "angel" for the company he was very much put out. The $40,000,000 heir hates to be called an "angel," and insists that he is merely a stockholder in the concern.

When the young man recently came into possession of the baking powder millions the fortune was placed at $16,000,000. But this does not represent its whole value. The income of the young man from baking powder alone is nearly $2,000,000 a year, and his friends estimate his fortune at $40,000,000. Some months ago he was induced to take an interest in the musical comedy, and it is believed that he put up much of the money for it. The young women of the company have been rehearsing daily at the Park theater.

There has been some trouble due to the fact that the star, Miss Audrey Maple, has been lost to the company during the rehearsals. It was discovered that she was under contract to another concern, and she had to quit.

Englishwoman Talks for Turks and Harem

United Press Service
LONDON, Aug. 18.—That polygamy is really a commendable institution for Turkey, and that it might even be adopted with profit in England, was the rather startling declaration today of Miss Grace Ellison, well-known English writer, who has just returned from a protracted visit in and about Constantinople.

"It is far better," she said today, "to have four women supported and protected than to have one well cared for and three sent out to struggle and starve under present conditions. I believe in one of two courses. Either put us in harems or give us freedom and equality with men. England condemns polygamy without stopping to consider its advantages to womanhood, while on the other hand she turns women adrift in the world and closes to them all the professions and trades she can."

"In other words, the Englishman won't support more than one female, and he won't help others to support themselves. Only today I met a woman of 55, the old maid daughter of a country parson, a semi-invalid, unfitted for work. She hadn't a single soul in the world who was disposed to support or even materially aid her.

"Such a thing could not happen in Turkey, which we think so benighted. A man supports all female relatives, if necessary, as well as his wives.

"I visited a number of harems in Turkey, and I see no reason to pity the women there. They are intelligent and well educated, and very fond of each other.

"No woman in Turkey is driven to the streets for lack of food and shelter. If she leads an irregular life she does it of her own free will. Society does not have her on its conscience."

GRANDMOTHER USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER FADED OR GRAY HAIR

Mixed With Sulphur, Makes the Hair Soft, Lustrous and Curls Deadens

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But the brewing at home is messy and out of date. Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drugstore for the ready-to-use product, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents.

Some druggists make their own, which is usually too sticky, so insist upon getting Wyeth's, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair, and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well known downtown druggist says his customers insist of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because, they say, it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.
