JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 29.—Governor Major today declared he would make good his promise to don overalls some time this afternoon and put into practice his theory that every citizen of the state should do a day's full work on the roads to give Missouri the best roadways in the country.

Today was the day set by the governor as good roads day, and thousands of men were expected to follow the governor's example.

One hundred convicts aided in the work, and moving picture men were on the job in various sections.

The occasion was the sixteenth annual Frontier Day celebration, which began today and will continue through Saturday evening.

During the four days Indians from the agencies of Nebraska and Wyoming, cowboys and cowgirls, all accoutred in the garb worn in the old days, will hold full sway. To see them in the riding, roping, shooting and the other contests, fully 20,000 visitors are here.

The Entire State Helps This Section Central Oregon Is Immensely Rich

This Is a Good Section to Boost For

ALTHOUGH DETAINED BY PRESSING BUSINESS FROM ATTENDANCE AT THE CENTRAL OREGON DEVELOPMENT LEAGUE, WILLIAM McMURRAY, GENERAL PASSENGER AGENT FOR THE OREGON-WASHINGTON RAILWAY AND NAVIGATION COMPANY SENDS MESSAGE OF ENCOURAGEMENT

It was the intention of Wm. McMurray, general passenger agent for the O.-W. R. & N. company to attend the Central Oregon Development League convention, but owing to business matters suddenly arising, he was unable to be here as he had planned.

However, he has written the following regarding the prospects of the Central Oregon Empire:

Lamath, Grant, Wheeler, Crook, Lake, Harney and Malheur counties comprise what is generally termed Eastern Oregon. These seven counties have an area of 48,760 square miles, and the census of 1910 gave them a population of 23,563. Delaware, the District of Columbia, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Vermont have a combined area of 41,310 square miles—7,450 miles less than the counties named—with an accredited population at the last census of 7,766,112.

The states and district mentioned had something more than 7,000,000 people than all of Oregon. The population per square mile in Delaware in 1910 was 102; in the District of Columbia, 5,617; in Massachusetts, 415; in New Hampshire, 47; in New Jersey, 237; in Rhode Island, 598; in Vermont, 35. Oregon's population per square mile in 1910 was SEVEN. Most of its inhabitants are in the Willamette Valley, and the population of Central Oregon per square mile is less than TWO.

Washington, Idaho and parts of Western Montana and Wyoming were a part of Oregon at one time. This was, indeed, a great state. It still is. There is none better. But we will have to get more than two people to the square mile in the central portion and to educate them up to the knowledge that the wonderful valley of the Willamette is only a part of this magnificent commonwealth.

The Central Oregon Development League is engaged in an effort to get people on the land. Back of this organization is the State Development League, and behind them there should be a united citizenship. Every portion of the state is clamoring for recognition—putting forth its claims for settlers through printed literature and through the personal solicitation of the people. A broader call is the silent one of the land itself in its bounteous crops and its splendid response to the efforts of the man who tills it.

The state organization does not discriminate. From its offices in Portland there goes forth literature descriptive of Oregon as a whole, and every section is impartially dealt with. Specific data concerning particular localities is furnished on request through the local organizations.

The most thickly populated sections of the state are near the larger cities and convenient to the transportation lines. These, with reference to the rail lines, are branching out so fast as the railroad builders can do the work. Money is not always available for railroad construction at the time the builders want it. The construction of a new railroad means a wait for returns. No railroad in the Pacific Northwest begins paying dividends from the time it is turned over to the operating department. It cost the O.-W. R. & N. $100,000 per mile to build a line from the Columbia River into the Des Chutes Valley in Crook county. Much of the distance was through a precipitous and rocky canyon, where there is neither present nor prospective revenue. It was Central Oregon's rich valleys that led to the building. Another branch of our line is being built westward from Vale into Harney county. When these roads will unite, and when other lines will be constructed I cannot say, but they will be built in time for the convenience of the people and for the transportation that will be had. Your great forests, your grain fields, your orchards and your stock will furnish traffic of immense volume.

Fabulous wealth exists here. There are homes for multiplied thousands in this region, and it will attract those who are now looking for just what you have to offer.

When the purchase of Alaska was under consideration in the United States senate, certain American statesmen went on record as saying that it would be easy at any price. The purchase of the territory which includes Oregon did not arouse any enthusiasm. Even when it applied for a territorial government Daniel Webster said: "It is so far off that a delegate to congress could not reach its nation's capital until a year after the expiration of its term."

In face of the fact that we have had three members of the cabinet with us this summer, and that we have representation in both branches of the congress, it would seem possible that even the greatest statesmen may err at times.

Distance has been annihilated in the years which have intervened between the formation of the provisional government in 1843 and the establishment of a territorial government six years later.

Alaska has sent over $200,000,000 in gold to the assay office in Seattle alone since 1898 as interest on the purchase price of less than $2,000,000. Her fisheries, her coal and her other products, in addition to the continued output of gold, means many additional millions for the future.

The purchase price of Oregon cannot be set down in figures. It cost something besides money, and its possession and occupation means more than sordid bargaining. It was bought with the life-blood of heroic men and brave women, and made habitable through the efforts of pioneers who braved perils, withstood hardships, encountered privations, and who sacrificed much in order that the wilderness might be reclaimed. These noble men and women were empire builders in the only true meaning of the word, and to whom credit alone should be given. All honor to them.

The cost of the land may not be told. But who shall say it was dearly bought. The sacrifice of the pioneer is a precious heritage. They bequeath a legacy the value of which we can never estimate. Alaska has made generous returns. She has given princely sums for the pittance paid. She is still producing enormous wealth. In time, however, her stores of gold and other metals will be worked out to depletion, her measure of coal will become exhausted and the fishing industry wane. This is the history of products of this character.

Oregon, however, will continue to yield. While the earth remains seed time and harvest shall not cease. In the fertile valleys and uplands of this vast domain there is a storehouse from which unending supply shall come to meet man's needs and add to his wealth in money and chattels.

Agriculture is a science—an art. It means in simple terms the supplying of human wants from the products of the soil and associated industries. Agriculture is Oregon's gold of today and its Golconda of the days to come.

Development has seemingly been tardy and settlement slow. This is

"Mental Clinic" Hygienic

United Press Service
NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—A "mental clinic" in active operation for the purpose of testing school children and classifying them as mentally alert, dull or idiotic, will be one of the novel features open to visitors attending the fourth International Congress on School Hygiene, according to an announcement made today by Dr. Thomas A. Storey of the College of the City of New York, and secretary general of the congress.

The "mental clinic" will be in operation the entire week of the congress from August 25 to August 30, and will be for the purpose of demonstrating to educators and educational health officials just how easy it is to measure and time to be wasted by using "dull" school children in classrooms with their minds untrained. Dr. Storey contends that a large number of methods of testing school children to determine how fast they should be advanced, now used by teachers, are altogether impractical as a means of securing prompt results. His mental clinic is especially expected to prove not only an interesting novelty in the way of an exhibit, but also an instructive lesson for all educators and educational health officials who are desirous of improving school conditions in their respective localities.

Not Only in Klamath Falls

Similar Cases Occur Daily in This Valley

Not only here in Klamath Falls, but in our neighboring towns, the same good story is heard. An encouraging instance from Medford is given here, and will be read by us with great interest.

Mrs. J. H. Hanson, Central Ave., Medford, Ore., says: "I was so bad with kidney trouble that I couldn't do my housework. My back was weak and painful in the morning when I got up. I was lame and sore. The kidney secretions were unclean and my health ran down until I was hardly able to get about. While in that condition I read about Dean's Kidney Pills, and got a box. I felt better from the time I commenced taking them, and it wasn't long before I was cured. I recommend Dean's Kidney Pills to anyone afflicted with kidney complaint. My former endorsement of Dean's Kidney Pills still holds good. Since this remedy cured me I have had no further attacks of kidney complaint, and I have enjoyed good health."
