PRINCETON WANTS
STUDENT COACHES

ATHLETIC BOARD SEeks TO MAKE COLLEGIANS MORE
SOURCES OF PAID COACH
MUST KEEP BACK

By H. L. SHELDON

(Written for the United Press)
NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—A change there is a stir in the athletic world, namely the practice of employing student coaches by members of the various teams, and even college presidents are being urged to discontinue such practices, claiming the professional coach should be employed.

The athletic board has stated that hereafter the professional coach shall be in the grand stand during the games and take no part in the direction of play. The board will then be left to the captain and his board of strategy. During the game in the grand stand, the board of strategy will be in the grand stand, the board of strategy will be in the grand stand, the board of strategy will be in the grand stand.

The professional coach has already fallen at Princeton. After this year the board of strategy will be in the grand stand, the board of strategy will be in the grand stand, the board of strategy will be in the grand stand.

There has been much stirring about the other side of athletic at Princeton. Having taken a keen view of statistics, which show that athletic careers in an extreme, the board of strategy will be in the grand stand, the board of strategy will be in the grand stand, the board of strategy will be in the grand stand.

Princeton has hopes of having Yale on the regular string of boxing foes, now that the tie has been broken by the case of the color. Yale was put off by the fight. The challenge came unexpectedly, and caught Coach Smith with his men in the center of the bout. He was hardly ready for the time, but went to it in the belief that it would lead to more games in the future. The result is a draw, and brought little consolation to followers of the Blue, who have doubts as to the English boxing system. The Princeton bunch was as fresh as a bunch of dates when they pulled over the line, but the heavy English equipment had the best of Yale. They began splashing soon after the mile mark was passed. By the time the finish mark was reached the crew was all in and two of the men all but collapsed.

TOWER PROVES
HIS THEORIES

DESPITE PREDICTIONS OF PESSIMISTS, HE PLANTED AN ORCHARD, AND THE FRUIT CAN BE SEEN BY NONE

Eleven years ago, when R. W. Tower talked of planting an orchard on his homestead near Worden, the "knowing ones" tried to dissuade him from such folly. When he disregarded the advice of these wise ones, and began planting fruit trees, they shook their heads and waited for the finish.

This year Mr. Tower carried off many of the prizes in fruits at the county fair, put up 355 quart cases of assorted fruits, has more than two tons of apples put away for winter, not to mention the many gallons of preserves and jellies and such.

His orchard, not yet at its best, is considered one of the finest in the county and emphasizes the diversity of Klamath county industries.

Society of Colonial Wars Meet
United Press Service
NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—With delegates present from every town and city in New York where there are branches, the Society of Colonial Wars met here today in annual session.

We Ask, Why?

Why worry along with an education when you can be a caddy and possibly grow into a golf champion, should be an argument for English youngsters. Experts have figured that about $12,500,000 is spent in England annually for caddies. The total expenditure of Mr. J. Bull for the game is placed at $20,000,000 a year. It is estimated that $6,500,000 is spent for golf balls and $625,000 for clubs. There are approximately 250,000 golf bags hammering the pill in England.

The
SUNSET GROCERYMore Scoring Than Usual This Season

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—With the big football games now about due, it will be only a short time until the sharps will come forth with their annual chirps as to the rules. They are welcome to their guess, but there has been freer scoring this season than during the old days.

Yale and Navy were the only teams in the East to reach the list of November without being scored upon. The Blue was held to a 9-to-0 score twice up that time—by Maine and by Washington and Jefferson.

Points were registered against Harvard, Pennsylvania, Dartmouth, Army, Cornell and Carleton by the smaller colleges. In years gone by it was a high crime and misdemeanor to have a touchdown or goal from field slipped over by one of the secondary teams. Now, however, it has gotten to be almost a habit, and no one worries.

The handling of the forward pass has greatly improved. It has been handled with more certainty and precision. In the recent games in the East, however, when the fields were soggy with mud and water, old style football was about all that could be used. No better example of just how much a good kicker means to a team could be found than the Dartmouth game. Fast, open play was impossible, as the field was a mass of water and mud. Princeton could not get through the Dartmouth line, or around her ends. When the kicking started the Tigers were driven back. The ball was in Princeton's territory practically all of the time.

Little doubt is felt at the present time but that Harvard will carry off the Eastern honors. The play of the Crimson has been far above that shown by their rivals, and it also has been consistent. With such individual stars as Maban and Brickley, they have much the better of the argument. Yale was not able to put her full strength on the field in the early games, owing to injuries, but figuring the dope, the Blue ranks several points below Harvard.
