ground open with plows all winter," he continued, "and if the soil does not freeze too deep, men will be kept at work all the time. There is some rock work that was left for the winter, and this will soon be started."

A force of 75 or 80 men is employed in the work on the project. This year they have practically completed the main canal of the project, besides many of the biggest laterals.

Early next year the government will commence the construction of the dam across Sprague River, by means of which the water will be diverted for the irrigation of Indian farm land.

Toward this end, tests of the rock at the dam site are being made. There was also recently established auto- quarters for isolating persons with matic gauges on Sprague River and contagious disease was the statement ing the water supply, etc.
