Society Woman Supplies Funds for Murderer's Defense

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Dec. 27.—Mrs. Jasper Lynch, a figure in society of this resort, which numbers New York, Washington and Philadelphia fashionables among its patrons, has assumed a remarkable role, which has mystified the whole winter colony, in going to the defense of Wm. J. Leehan, on trial for the murder of Mrs. Caroline Turner.

The victim was beaten to death three years ago in the woods. Leehan was caught later. Lakewood was torn with dispute over his guilt. Then Mrs. Lynch decided she would supply the funds for his defense. She employed three of the best lawyers of the New Jersey bar. The prosecutor arranged for help from the attorney general of the state and his predecessor in office.

It is stated for Mrs. Lynch that she believes Leehan is the victim of a conspiracy, and she has become so interested in the case that she is willing to give her time, her money, and her energy to see the accused get justice.

Federals Loading Trains in the City of Mexico

The troops of Dictator Huerta have been hurried toward the north of Mexico for more than a month in effort to prepare for the march of Pancho Villa, the conqueror of Chihuahua. Almost every day trains have been loaded with provisions and troops for some point in the north where the stand to intercept Villa will be made. The ex-bandit, who took Juarez, on the American border, without much trouble, and then went on into Chihuahua, one of the richest cities of the country, where he met with no resistance at all, has delayed his promised march toward Mexico City. By the time he is ready the troops of Huerta will be scattered along his route ready to make a fight.

The Farmer and Rural Credit

Congressman Outlines What the Proper System Could Do for This Branch of Endeavor

To make farm life more profitable, as well as attractive through a sane system of rural credits and to end the yearly exodus of farmers' boys to the city, is the purpose of the government's efforts to obtain rural credits legislation at the earliest possible time, and the goal toward which the national legislature is working, was explained by Representative Robert J. Bulkeley of Ohio, chairman of the house committee which is investigating the subject. Chairman Bulkeley offers the following explanation to the million or more farmers of the country through the United Press.

By ROBERT J. BULKELEY, Representative from Ohio
(Written for the United Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5.—Although prices of agricultural products have mounted so high that the public justly complains of the cost of living, yet the returns for farm labor has not sufficiently increased the income to induce that development of agriculture which the country ought to have. Indeed, we are confronted by the problem of how to keep the farmers' boys on the farm, as well as by the problem of attracting new hands to the farm. And all this has an important bearing on the high cost of living. The future of our country depends largely upon developing a large number of independent farmers, owning the land which they work; but unfortunately there is a present tendency toward tenant farming, as well as a tendency for farmers' boys to leave the farm for the great cities.

These tendencies must be met by making farm life more attractive, and in order that this may be accomplished farm labor must be made more profitable. To increase the farmers' credit facilities and to reduce the rate of interest paid by him will make farming more profitable, not only by direct savings in interest charges, but also indirectly by affording the farmer the means by which to develop his land in such a manner as to obtain the best results from it. And if we can make the owner of a mortgaged farm feel more secure of his position, we shall increase not only the care and attention that he will give to the land, but also increase his measure of satisfaction in his work.

In Europe, the farmers have better credit facilities and pay lower rates of interest than our farmers. This may partly be due to the more developed condition of their countries, but it is, without doubt, largely due to their co-operative efforts, and to legislation favoring rural credits.

Generally speaking, loans to farmers must be for longer periods than loans to merchants and manufacturers; and banks, when loaning to the farmers, must take into consideration that the farmer will not be able to pay his note until his crops are harvested and sold. National banks, which must keep their resources ever ready for the active needs of their depositors, necessarily, therefore, feel some embarrassment in lending to the farmers, except within rather conservative limits. It is not easy for the American farmer to reach the investor who can readily carry him through the season without demanding the return of the money loaned. The farmers of Germany and other European countries have their co-operative credit associations, which meet this need.

In practically all countries of Europe there are land mortgage associations and co-operative societies dealing in short time credits. Ordinarily these organizations are associations of borrowers absolutely controlled by the borrowers themselves. In this country we have numerous building and loan associations similar in many respects to the European land mortgage associations, but the work of these associations has been rather in the cities than in the rural districts.

Figures now being gathered by the department of agriculture show that the problem of adequate credit facilities at reasonable rates of interest is one which demands serious attention in this country. It is to be noted that each of the European countries that has worked out an advanced system of rural credits has been obliged to adopt the system to its own peculiar national conditions. In other words, while we may say that Europe generally has advanced far ahead of us in its treatment of this problem, we can not fail to notice that each country has developed its own national system of rural credits.

And the preliminary study has convinced the rural credit subcommittee on banking and currency that it will be necessary for us to develop an American national system, as it will not be possible to find ready made a suited system to our needs.

Much may be learned from a study of the several European systems, and our own building and loan associations, and the committee is now hard at work considering conditions and looking for facts without any preconceived notion as to what plan it may prove most wise to adopt.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

DON'T STAY GRAY! HERE'S AN OLD-TIME RECIPE THAT ANYBODY CAN APPLY

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out of date. Nowadays, by saking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get this famous old recipe, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair, and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and abundant.

Supreme Court Busied After the Holidays

United Press Service
WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5.—Meeting for its first session since December 22, the supreme court of the United States today almost equalled its record for the number of opinions handed down in one day. Chief Justice White is using every effort to clear the docket, and the court "speeded up" on its judgments.

Argument beginning today is scheduled in the contempt cases against President Samuel Gompers, Vice President John Mitchell and Secretary Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor. This is the second time this famous bit of litigation has been before the supreme court. It grows out of contempt proceedings instituted by Justice Daniel Thew Wright of the District of Columbia supreme court because of alleged violation of the labor leaders of that court's order forbidding continuance of a boycott against the Bucks Store and Range company of St. Louis.

Wright found the defendants guilty and sentenced Gompers to twelve months in jail, Mitchell to six months and Morrison to three months.

The supreme court rejected this finding on purely technical grounds, but granted that the district supreme court had the right to re-frame the contempt charges. This Judge Wright immediately did, appointing a committee of prosecutors. The labor leaders were again found guilty. They appealed to the United States supreme court.

Another case scheduled for early hearing, probably Wednesday, was that of the right of the government to remove George O. Henry of New York to Washington for trial on contempt charges. Henry, who is a member of a Wall street stock brokerage firm, refused to answer questions asked him by the Pujo money trust investigating committee concerning who profited by a deal in California Petroleum company stock. He was indicted by a local grand jury for contempt.
