Gossip and Progress of Nearby Communities as Chronicled in the Press.

Why Not Orate?

Eloquent speeches, depicting in rainbow hues the future of the Rogue River Valley, were heard at the annual meeting of the Commercial Club. They show that the optimism, hope and spirit, necessary for accomplishment, exist throughout the valley. They indicate the harmony and unity of purpose among all sections necessary for successful results. The unthinking might laugh at the enthusiasm shown—but the wise realize that enthusiasm is the most valuable asset a man or a community can have—that nothing really worth while has ever been accomplished without it. Enthusiasm is the first essential. It is the ebullition of optimism—and no city was ever built and no country ever developed by pessimism.—Medford Mail-Tribune.

To Work Old Claims

The owners of dry gulch placer claims are in hopes of having a good clean up this summer from the dry gulches that have not been worked for ten years. The last heavy snow and then a rain on top of the snow is filling the placer gold gulches with enough water to keep the miner busy for some time. There are several rich gulches in Humburg and Greenhorn that can only be worked profitably when there is very high water. The hydraulic mines in Cherry Creek, Greenhorn and Hawkinsville are being worked to their full extent.—Yreka Journal.

Don't Want Paving

Remonstrance after remonstrance against the proposed street paving was read at the meeting of the city council last night. Property owners on nearly every street affected made objections, and each remonstrance was referred to the street committee for consideration.—Eugene Guard.

Alaskan Glacier Is Jockeying With International Boundary Line

BLACK LINE ACROSS GRAND PACIFIC GLACIER SHOWING THE INTERNATIONAL BOUNDARY LINE

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 19.—Professor Lawrence Martin of the University of Wisconsin, has just returned after the discovery that nature is jockeying with the international boundary line between the United States and British Columbia at Yakutat Bay, Alaska. In this bay is an enormous glacier, which has been observed more or less regularly for more than 100 years. It is known as the Grand Pacific Glacier, and the professor, who is one of the first authorities in the country on the subject, went up there to study it. Between 1794 and 1894 the glacier had retreated sixty miles. Acting on this knowledge the emissaries of the United States and Great Britain got together in 1894 and established a boundary line about twelve miles behind the head of the glacier. But by June, 1912, it had retreated to within two miles of the boundary line, and in the next two months it had crossed back of the line, and Canada had a harbor, which was distinctly contrary to the spirit of the treaty, and Canada was happy. But the Canadians did not enjoy their harbor long enough to start to establish a port. The glacier has reversed, and is now going ahead again. And it is going ahead at a record rate. The world's record for advance of glaciers in Switzerland has never exceeded 133 feet in a year. The Grand Pacific glacier has shot ahead at the rate of 1,400 feet in a single year, and now is three-quarters of a mile on the United States side of the boundary line. Ice, which was 1,750 feet thick in 1894, had melted down to 1,000 feet by 1907, and by 1912 it had entirely disappeared.

Banquet a Success

Father-Son Gathering Most Interesting Occasion

stage of soups and salads, Toastmaster George Walton, by an effort heroic, left off eating long enough to make a few happy remarks appropriate to the occasion, after which he presented E. M. Chilcote, who gave an address of welcome.

Mr. Chilcote made every one feel like the guest of honor in a very short and pleasing talk. He was followed by Attorney Herbert Gale, with an eloquent discourse on "The Church as an Asset to the City."

Attorney W. H. Shaw pointed out in his talk on "The Business Man's church" the foundation of Christianity on which business and government depended. J. G. Camp spoke earnestly on the necessity of getting the young men in the church.

Frank M. Upp reviewed the history of Sunday schools for the past hundred years, and outlined the "Progressive Sunday School" of the future. C. E. Widdoes took his audience on a mythical excursion through the Holy Land.

"The Mission of the League" was the subject of an interesting talk on the Epworth League by J. C. Yaden. At this stage, Toastmaster Walton, who had finished his meal, and had been looking over the audience, deviated from the printed program and called on several of the visitors for short talks. Among the most interesting of these impromptu talks was the one by Mr. H. L. Glem, local manager of the Western Union Telegraph company, who spoke of the value of coming into personal contact with one another. He illustrated by saying he had received an invitation, printed, to attend the banquet, but had not intended to come. Later, some one came to him personally, shook him by the hand, and extended a verbal invitation. That was different, and he attended.

Toastmaster Walton said: "When we have some one on the program likely to take up too much time, we always put him down at the bottom, then ring in as many as possible ahead of him, so that by the time he is called on the hour will be so late he won't have much time to talk."

The victim Walton's remarks, Rev. E. C. Richards, enjoyed the joke immensely, and refuted the insinuations by an interesting short talk on "The Outlook."

The long face and the funeral aspect commonly supposed to characterize a church function was noticeably absent. Every one seemed glad to be there, and every one assured every one else of their enjoyment. Such an occasion cannot help but result in great good for the church and the community.
