Founder of New Thought Asks for a Divorce

Dr. Julia Seton Sears, founder of the New Thought church in New York has filed suit for absolute divorce against Frank W. Sears, naming as correspondent an actress named Pauline Langdon. The papers in the case were immediately sealed, but in them it is alleged that Sears frequently met the actress at her hotel.

Sears is the New Thought minister who married a young couple under a new set of rules for New Thought marriages, which Sears established in the church.

At the novel ceremony a woman in the balcony shouted to Sears as he was in the midst of the ceremony: "Has a married man who is not free, and is living illegally with another woman any right to teach harmony?"

The identity of the woman was not at that time disclosed, but it has since been learned that she will play an important part in the divorce proceedings.

Sears' reply to the question was that if the couple were inharmoniously mated they were in sin to continue living together. In turn he asked the person in the balcony: "What of the proof?" But there was no answer.

Sixteen Valve Motor for Car

Burman Is Building Something Startling for Indianapolis Sweepstakes---Other Notes of Sport Circles

BY HAL SHERIDAN
(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—While the National and American Leagues are fixing their fences, the Federal League making their hair-raising midnight raids on the "organization" corrals, and college crews beginning to lumber up, things are also stirring for the big sporting event of the year in that line. The 500-mile sweepstakes run on the Speedway at Indianapolis is now the real wallop of the year so far as automobile speeding is concerned and manufacturers and drivers are already making preparations for the grind.

Bob Burman, "Speed King," who has made more of a record as an exhibition driver in smashing records than by piloting cars to victory in open competition, is out this year with a firm resolve to cop the Indianapolis classic. Bob saw the Sheridan coat of arms on the palatial Sheridan office while in New York recently and dropped in to plan how he expects to turn the trick.

In the first place he is building a special car at Battle Creek, Mich. This car is Burman's idea of the last word in speed construction. It is to carry a sixteen valve motor, four to each cylinder, and is generally framed along lines figured to pull out every ounce of power and speed possible. Many of the foreign made racing cars are now equipped with the sixteen-valve motors, but this feature is new to American machines. Burman has also re-jiggered the usual arrangement of seats alongside the driver on the racing cars. The seat for his mechanic is to be set alongside the driver, as usual, but back some six inches or more. The mechanic's body will therefore be on a line with the back of Burman's seat, leaving free arm room for steering the car. Burman found that his elbow was constantly bumping his mechanic in his old cars.

The new racing car is to be equipped with wire wheels, as Burman believes they are now the most practical. "I did things last year with wire wheels," said Burman, "that would have meant certain upset had I been using wood. The wire wheels are stronger and better in every way. One day last summer my mechanic was hitting it down a road better than fifty miles an hour when he went off a bridge. The car plunged into space and fell fifty feet on a railroad track, landing upright on the wheels. The mechanic escaped with hardly a scratch, and the wheels on the machine were scarcely put out of true. The wheels were wire, of course. Wooden wheels would have been smashed to pieces."

Burman has decided to withdraw from the barn-storming game he has been following. He has sold his Benz car, and will confine his racing to the big open events with his special car. His efforts will be centered on the Indianapolis race. Burman covered one lap of the Speedway at the rate of 93 miles an hour last year, and believes he will be able to do better than this with his new speeder.

Never having managed a baseball team or organized a league, we are not in the position to advise the restaurateurs, oyster and fish merchants, bankers, lawyers, coal dealers, real estate dealers and members of the Canadian parliament and others on how the Federal League should proceed in ripping the lining out of "organized" baseball. But there is an interesting problem to be worked out by the league leaders.

With Joe Tinker signing up big leaguers for his Chicago team and all reports indicating that President Weeghman has no more regard for money than a ham sandwich when it comes to signing up players, information as to the make-up of some of the teams would be interesting. This is one baseball muss, however, in which the fan, the fellow who pays his money, may sit back and smile. He stands to come out on top, whether the Federal League lives or dies. If it lives and puts up good baseball at popular prices—well that will be one step toward lowering the cost of living. If it dies (which doesn't seem a matter to worry over at present, judging from the lusty swats handed the National League), the "organized" baseball interests will probably come from the post mortem considerably chastened and much wiser. A league is not going to be held up long, however, with one, or possibly two, strong clubs in the circuit. The race must be reasonably close to keep up interest. If the Federal League hasn't some way of distributing players, they may find Joe Tinker and his Chicago bunch breaking through hands down. Indianapolis won the pennant last year, but where will Bill Phillips and his team stand this year with the Chicago bunch? St. Louis has Miner Brown, Baltimore has Otto Knebe, and Kansas City has George Stovall, but one man doesn't make a ball team any more than one swallow makes a spring or a drunk. One high class man makes a lot of difference in an otherwise mediocre club, but he can't necessarily put up a fight against a well balanced team.

Baseball fans may be sentimental to a certain extent, but they are going to spend their cash where they get the best baseball for the money. The American League got them, and the Feds will draw their share if they deliver the goods. Crowds are not going to be attracted, however, with one or two fast, classy teams and the rest hopping along on crutches. Every league must have its top and bottom of the percentage column, of course. This means that there will probably always be St. Louis Browns, Cardinals, Brooklyns, etc. But there must be a balance. Every league will have its one or two weak teams, but five or six teams can't be left to their fate while two or three other club owners, blessed with plenty of cash, build up world beater pennant chasers.

F. D. Sayres and Wife Sail

UNITED PRESS SERVICE
LONDON, Jan. 22.—Francis Bowles Sayres and his wife, who was Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson, daughter of the president, expected to return to the United States on the Olympic, which sails today. They have been spending their honeymoon here and in France. After reaching New York, the Sayres probably will go to Washington for a brief visit at the White House before going to their home in Massachusetts.

The Mexicans have a turn for the picturesque which displays itself in the street names of their capital. There is Love of God street, The Holy Ghost street, Sad Indian street, Street of the Wood Owls, Lost Child street. Shop names, too, in Mexico are out of the common. A drug store calls itself Gate of Heaven, and a drinking saloon describes itself frankly as The Bait of the Devil.

The largest tillable far min the United States is near Tarkio, Mo., and contains 23,000 acres. The land alone is estimated to be worth $2,000,000.

The Golden State of California now produces four times as much cement as gold.
