Prison Reform Is a Big Success in Ohio

United Press Service

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 22.—"There's a spark of good in every man; the 'blood will tell' idea is bosh; if a man isn't a thorough criminal he can be trusted; normal men have honor and they can be relied upon to a certain extent, some more, some less."

Thus prefacing an explanation of Ohio's new "make man" policy, Warden P. E. Thomas, the first expert criminologist ever in charge of Ohio's famous old penitentiary, today told the United Press correspondent that the honor system among convicts is a success.

Warden Thomas has experimented with the honor system in Ohio a little over a year. Here are a few plain facts about the system as explained by the warden:

About 30 men are working in the open air on their honor. A big percentage of the men are building roads for the state. Guards are not needed; an overseer bosses the work. The largest percentage of "honor men" are life termers. They wear blue overalls like ordinary workers, and have Sunday clothes. They go to church on Sundays. They work eight hours a day. They are paid five cents an hour; 90 per cent goes to their dependents, the rest to them.

Less than one per cent have tried to escape in a year. Honor men have all served from one to fifteen years behind the bars.

One prisoner who was recently sent out to work "on his honor" after sixteen years behind the bars, was badly frightened by a passing automobile. He is serving a life sentence for murder.

Warden Thomas has accomplished other things aside from succeeding with his honor system. He has eliminated stripes and substituted a light gray material for prison uniforms; abolished inhuman punishments, such as water cures, chain stringings and whippings; put into operation the theory that a full stomach contributes to discipline; built new and better ventilated cells and established a dormitory for "good" prisoners, where several hundred of them will soon have their own tables, chairs and beds—with no bars in sight.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—The organization committee created under the new currency law, which has been conducting hearings here since Monday, today expected to complete its local work, and leave for St. Louis. The committee is scheduled to conduct a two days' hearing in St. Louis and then go to Kansas City.

Map Showing Operations in Battle

The third great success of General Villa was won at Ojinaga, across the Rio Grande River from Presidio, Texas. After he took Juarez, he marched south and found Chihuahua, the richest city in Mexico outside of the capital, evacuated by Dictator Huerta's troops. He marched in with no resistance.

The rebels had fled north toward the American border, and Huerta, sitting tight in Mexico City, had been unable to send help. Villa dispatched a regiment or two after them, and about the first of the year began the fighting. The federalists still held the town, and Villa became disgusted. He left Chihuahua with a few more than 1,000 troops and marched north. He took command, and within six hours after he had begun operations the federal troops fled to the American side. Some ten or twelve generals were in the retreat.

Ojinaga is located on top of a truncated cone, and commands the country for miles in either direction. Back of it is the Rio Grande River, with a shallow ford to the United States. Eighteen and twenty miles out from Ojinaga are the passes of La Mula and Mulato, and beyond that in all directions stretches a desert of sand, sage brush and chaparral. The two passes are of easy defense, and should be a bar to any armed advance of artillery were properly placed and served.

This battle gave the constitutionalists control of all the north of Mexico, or, rather, gave Villa control. Whether or not he is willing to share his success with General Carranza, provisional president, is yet to be seen.

He has since announced that now he will march on Mexico City. With no federal troops in the north there will be no attack from the rear, and the road is open to him for the final engagement with Huerta.

Money

Is the easiest made when saved, and saving is especially easy when foresight is used—for instance, in buying groceries, anticipate your wants ahead and buy your supplies in quantities at practically wholesale—eliminate the hap-hazard way of buying from hand-to-mouth. It is just as easy for your grocery man to put up a box of soap, a case of fruit or vegetables, 50 or 100 pounds of sugar, rice, beans, dry fruit, etc., as it is the small purchases of many articles gotten so often—and the bigger way you'll find such a good investment that once tried will be followed up with the result that a pleasing balance will be in your favor at the end of the year.

Come in, bring a list; no harm if you don't buy—just the same we'll be glad to show you how and why we can about equally share profits with you to our mutual advantage.

HOME MEETINGS WILL BE HELD

FIRST OF SERIES TONIGHT AT MOORE RESIDENCE ON WEST SIDE—WALTON WILL LEAD THIS MEETING

(Communicated)

Preparatory to more public meetings at the church, Grace Methodist Episcopal church is planning a series of home meetings in various parts of the city.

The first of these will be held tonight at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Moore, 59 Bridge street, across the river, in the west part of town. All those in the neighborhood are especially urged to attend, as well as all others who can possibly do so.

We hope all the church workers, in whatever part of town, will try to be present. An evening of social converse, song and prayer will be held.

No one who is not in the habit of public speech will be embarrassed by being called upon to take part, but you are freely invited to do so. Geo. J. Walton will lead the meeting tonight.
