Two Percent of Land in Garden

Finance More Than Farming Needed

There is Plenty of Land in Garden
Says Agricultural Expert
But Lack of Shipping Facilities Is Harmful

United Press Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — To encourage the interest in general farming, several governors and other government officials of the land especially adapted for the purpose have been selected by United Press service. The land is not available for free to the public, but is being offered at a reasonable price.

The figures do not make for a good crop, but there are many other factors to be considered. The prices are generally without any exceptions.

Many vegetables growing in the garden may be missing from the market because they are not available for general farming.

A pound of food represents an investment of from 15 to 25 cents, providing basic food supplements have been fed for six weeks.

The problem in New York, Chicago, and other cities is whether the market is ready for them. The city people are turning back to the garden and are prepared to try new methods of quick treatment.

Dr. Cameron was moved to this conclusion by his visit early in the season to an agricultural garden where he observed a novel method of farming.
