QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

EAT LESS MEAT IF YOU FEEL BACKACHE OR THE BLADDER TROUBLES YOU—SALT IS FINE FOR KIDNEYS.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

A Few Sidelights From Mexico

"Inside Dope" in Letter From Capital

Mexican Reception of Embargo Order a Big Surprise. Villa a Military Genius. How Huerta Took the News

United Press Service

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 27.—The Mexicans in the capital took President Wilson's act of raising the embargo in their characteristic way. That is to say, they didn't do what they were expected to do. While the news came as a bombshell to the government officials, the public seemed to be in no way excited by the fact that Washington had, in a manner of speaking, decided to give assistance to Carranza and the rebels and all the war munitions they could use. "Trust the Mexicans to do the unexpected thing," say American old-timers here. And, in this instance, the Mexicans followed the rule. Americans really expected them to do something, to riot or insult Americans on the street. On the evening of the day that the news reached the capital the American Club was deserted; Americans were sticking to their homes. But the evening passed without event and the next day, though the newspapers, under big headlines scored the Americans and President Wilson, Americans who ventured on the streets saw no indication of ill feeling.

Then the word went around among the Americans in the colony that the Mexican people in the capital were mostly in favor of Carranza and that, instead of blaming Americans for aiding the rebels, they were delighted with President Wilson's assistance.

Within a few days it became apparent to Americans that this was true and that the average Mexican man on the street or in the store showed no resentment but only pleasure—that is, he showed his pleasure secretly to the American friends he could trust—in America's action.

There is no one general in the world who has had as much fighting during the past three years as General Pancho Villa, rebel leader. Military attaches of the embassies and legations in the Mexican capital constantly pay tribute to Villa's military genius. An instance of Villa's military cleverness was described by a European military student, thus:

"Villa never overlooks an opportunity to take advantage of the enemy. All of his fighting lately has been done by means of a long, thin firing line. He distributes his troops over a vast space. It's one of the cleverest things he has ever done, for he knows well that the federal soldiers are men who have been forced into the army and their generals must keep them bunched, as they dare not let them get too far away, for fear of desertion. Durango, Victoria, and Ojinaga were lost in this way, just because the federals didn't dare to split their bodies of troops into small bands."

Huerta has all of an Indian's stoicism. This is the way he spent the eventful day on which came the news that President Wilson has raised the embargo on arms shipped to the rebels.

About 10 o'clock, after breakfast before word came of the raising of the embargo, he went to the Cafe Colon, merely stopping off for a drink, on his way to the palace. Of course, in every cafe in the capital there is always someone ready to take a drink with "the president." At noon he was still there, with secret service men, waiting around at various tables and standing on the sidewalk outside the cafe doors.

At 1 o'clock came the news that the embargo had been raised. The Mexican and American newspaper correspondents began a wild search for Huerta. At last, at 3 o'clock, one American photographer and an English newspaper woman, seeing his car outside the cafe, entered the place and demanded to see the president. The secret service men immediately bundled them both into an automobile and took them to cells in the nearest police station.

In the meantime other correspondents had found Madero, the minister of foreign relations, at his home at lunch.

"I don't know where Huerta is," he said. "He leads a very informal life. Come to my office at 5 o'clock." There were a dozen correspondents there at the appointed hour. After a long wait Madero got into his carriage, and the correspondents trailed him to the palace, where the elusive dictator was located.

A score of newspaper men immediately sent in their cards. Out came a secretary.

"The president will probably make a statement," he said. Another long wait until 9:30, when the secretary announced:

"The president can't see you. He is very busy. Maybe he will make a statement tomorrow."

Within ten minutes Huerta was in his automobile speeding toward another cafe.

A New Hack for an Old One—How It Can Be Done in Klamath Falls

The back aches at times with a dull indescribable feeling, making you weary and restless, piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys and again the loins are so lame that to stoop is agony. No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back if the kidneys are weak. You cannot reach the cause. Klamath Falls residents would do well to profit by the following example.

Mrs. Byron Cole, 137 Boulevard avenue, Ashland, Ore., says: "I suffered for a year from a most distressing kidney and bladder complaint. I stooped, I had a sharp stitch in my back. Often I could hardly straighten after one of these attacks. I was sometimes bothered with dizziness, and my health was all run down. Duan's Kidney Pills were just what I needed. In less than a week after I began taking them, I improved in every way. I steadily got better, and it wasn't long before I had no more trouble. My health is now good."
