

Uncle Sam Goes to County Fairs

Bureau Is Formed for Work by Dept. of Agriculture

Transportation and Marketing of Farm Crops Will Be Given Special Attention by Government Farm Experts

United Press Service
WASHINGTON, March 4.—The county fair, where the red Hereford bull flaunts a blue ribbon and the prize pumpkin and the trotting race are rivals for attention, has been seized upon by the department of agriculture as one of the most direct methods of reaching the farmer. Dr. W. J. Spillman, in charge of the office on farm management, is organizing a large force of "demonstrators" to attend the fairs next fall and give free demonstrations in everything from making a glass of crabapple jelly to building a barn.

County agents now in the field have done much to aid thousands of farmers in the way of organization and individual effort, but their chief difficulty so far has been to convince the soil tillers that the government is not merely SHIRKING its duty so far as not "meddling," and that scientists can do every day things better because they can get at it scientifically.

This difficulty has largely been overcome by tactfulness, such as that exercised by a Texas agent a few days ago when he called on a farmer who said that he was too busy to waste time with a "book farmer," as he had to go to town to get a man to fix a gasoline engine that refused to run.

The agent at once dropped the matter of farm management and made a diagnosis. He cleaned the spark plug, adjusted the carburetor, ground the valves a little and soon had the engine running like new. The delighted farmer thereupon not only found time to talk but to introduce the agent to a dozen of his neighbors. The woman on the farm is also receiving a large share of the attention of the farm management of-

See and a number of women agents are giving time to this work.

Transportation and cooperation are held by Dr. Spillman to be the two keys to the rural situation today and with this in view he never misses an opportunity to urge the use of the parcels post and organization of producers and consumers' leagues. Furthermore, he believes that great evils come from overplanting one year and underplanting the next, and that a better understanding with the consumer will remedy this.

"In the year 1901 the potato crop was very small and the price was correspondingly high," said he, illustrating this point. "This led to overplanting the next year and the crop was so large that the price was the lowest in fourteen years. This caused underplanting in 1903, which again brought on an abnormally large crop the year following, and so it still goes on. The farmer is confronted with the difficulty that he does not know who wants his produce. If he afraid he will not get his pay for it, sends it to the city customer he is. On the other hand, the consumer in the city is afraid to order directly from the farmer for fear he will not get what he orders.

"The remedy for this is the organization of a producers' and a consumers' league. Farmers who join such a league should be made to give a small bond that what they supply shall be as represented and the city consumer must give similar assurance that he will pay for what he gets. If 100 or more families bought the principal portion of their supplies in this manner the expense of maintaining a central office would be reasonable and the advantages would be manifold."

With 190,000 square miles cleared of the Texas fever tick, so fatal to cattle not immunized, Dr. A. D. Melvin, chief of the bureau of animal industry, believes that the fight can be continued until every disease-carrying tick of this species in the United States succumbs. To this end he expects congress to appropriate $350,000 in addition to $50,000 for the purpose of encouraging the raising of blooded cattle in the cleaned-up area. It is also the aim of the department of agriculture to have the present laws amended so that it will be necessary to clear cattle of the ticks by dipping them in an arsenical preparation before shipping them to the Northern markets. Originally the tick was found in ten of the largest states below the heavy frost line, but it is gradually losing ground before the advance of science.

"As we eliminate a territory of ticks we have to be doubly careful to guard that territory," said Dr. Melvin in support of his plan for killing the ticks before shipping cattle. "In case of accidents to cattle en route, by the breaking down of trains or something of that sort the ticks might get out and re-infest a cleared area. Then there is always the danger of ticks being blown out of the cars, etc."

The $50,000 sought by Dr. Melvin is to be used in increasing the amount of live stock and improving its breed in areas where animal husbandry and dairying have not been extensively carried on because of the presence of ticks. Special attention will be given to those districts in Mississippi and Louisiana and similar sections where the presence of the boll weevil has made cotton raising a precarious industry.

Bostonian Explains Why Mexicans Like Uprisings

United Press Service
MEXICO CITY, March 4.—It will be a sad day for many Mexicans when the revolution ends. Here's a story told by an American from Boston, who has large mining interests in Michoacan, and who knows his part of Mexico like a book. He doesn't want his name used, for fear the Mexicans may take his mine away from him:

"In my part of the country," he said to the United Press correspondent, just before sailing for America, "neither the rebels nor the federals want a decisive victory. They work it this way: The mine owners and farmers get together and pay the federal chief of the district so much a day for protecting their property from the rebels. The chief pockets the money and orders the soldiers and rurales to pay especial attention to these particular mines and farms. I know one officer who is making $65 gold a day in this way, and in times of peace he wouldn't get $65 a month. Now, you couldn't get this federal officer to drive the rebels away, for it's money in his pocket to have them stay.

"The rebels, on the other hand, for some mysterious reason, won't come to conclusions with the federals and drive them away either. There is a suspicion that the federal leader is splitting up with the rebel leader. If the rebel leader were to enter a decisive engagement against the federals and drive them out the miners and farmers would also leave and so the rebels would kill the goose that lays the golden eggs. And so, by not whipping each other, both sides make money, while a victory, in a fight, would only result in hollow and penniless honor.

"In one place in Michoacan the rebels recently gave a big dance in town and invited all the federals to attend, which they did. A fine time was had by all, thanks to champagne which was purchased with money that had been taken, for protection, from the farmers and miners.

They can talk about peace conferences in Mexico all they please, and

Uncle Sam Will Plan Houses for Farmers

The department of agriculture at Washington is undertaking to teach the farmers throughout the country how to build farm houses. A weekly bulletin is issued by the department containing a perspective and a ground floor drawing of what is called an inexpensive and convenient home.

This action on the part of the department was the result of the belief that the farm house is the most important building on the farm, and that money, if judiciously expended in its planning and construction, is well invested.

For the past year officials of the department have been making an investigation of this subject, and, among other things, this investigation developed that, as a rule, existing farm houses are inconsistent in cost with the value of the farm and the lack of improvements in them is too often in striking contrast with the outbuildings and farm machinery.

The objects sought are to provide structures reasonable in cost and of good material, and so arranged as to give for the money expended the maximum in health, comfort and happiness to the family and added convenience to the housewife in her domestic operations.

In the plans suggested, and which will be sent on application to the department, the endeavor will be made to provide good lines and pleasing proportions that are essential to beauty in all structures, and are the result of skillful designing rather than additional material and labor.

Any farmer applying to the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C. will be supplied, free of cost, with the perspective ground floor plans and specifications of a number of farm houses which will be prepared by architects in the government service.
