Would Rebuild Old Slav Empire

Servia's Plan Endorsed by Montenegro

Much of the Old Territory Is Held by Austria, So This Might Precipitate Another War

By HENRY WOOD
(Staff Correspondent of the United Press)

BELGRADE, Servia, March 5.— Five hundred war veterans, each armed to the teeth, each as ready and willing to die as a frog is ever ready and willing to jump into water, and each waiting only the psychological moment which each and all consider inevitable. This is the nice little war cloud which is still nursing itself down on the border of the Balkans.
And this is the nice little war cloud which Servia says that European diplomacy can never conjure away until it has either broken out in war and won, or broken out into war and irretrievably lost forever.

Servia has dreamed a great dream, and there are some psychologists who say that a great dream, if dreamed hard enough, and if dreamed when the person is awake and in full possession of his faculties is one of the most irresistible forces in the world.
Servia's dream is a result of its success in the recent Balkan wars, a dream dreamed in the full consciousness of the strength and power which it has demonstrated it possesses. The dream is to put back on the map of the world the old Slav empire as it existed before it went down before the over-running Turks.

Servia's dream, too, has one other merit, and possibly one other source of strength, in that it is not only merely political, but humanitarian.
The Slav race is now almost as badly scattered as the Jews, almost a race without a country, and it is Servia's dream to re-create a united homeland.

Just at the present moment, as in fact for a century past, the one particular nightmare in this dream is Austria. Austria, long known as the bully of Europe, had not only been gradually gobbling up the big Slav provinces, but also concentrating her strength against possible formation of a big Slav empire on her own southern border. One by one, and even sometimes by twos, she has come into possession of the Slav provinces of Croatia, Slavonia, Dalmatia, Bosnia and Herzegovina. All of these are inhabited solely by Slavs, who speak only the Slav or Servian language, and who have not only the same ethnic origin, but the same racial traditions and the same desire for political as well as racial unity.

Austria, in its century-old opposition to this possible Slav kingdom, has had two motives. In the first place the entire southern half of the Austria-Hungarian empire is inhabited largely by Slavs. They have never been well treated, and have never been content under the Austrian yoke.

The formation of a Slav empire to the south would mean that a goodly portion of these would hike instantly to the other side of the Hungarian border.

The forcing of the Hungary boundary down through the Balkans until Austria-Hungary should some day have the old Turkish seaport of Salonica has also been the one great ambition of Austria. This ambition, however, the recent Balkan wars is believed to have forever thwarted.
Salonica having passed into the hands of the Greeks. The creation of the new kingdom of Albania, whose existence is guaranteed by the powers, also ends her dream of a Mediterranean exit and naval base on that portion of the Adriatic. While Austria has thus been obliged to renounce her great ambition, it hasn't sweetened in any way her attitude against the Slavs, and this attitude Servia is convinced will one day mean war, and the object of that war will be the getting back of the Slav provinces into a future Slav empire.

As a matter of fact, Servia has already accomplished great steps towards the realization of its dream. As a result of the Balkan wars it has now doubled its territory and all of this new territory was formerly part of the old Slav empire. This has increased its population from 3,000,000 to over 5,000,000, and while there are over 8,000,000 others still living in the Slav provinces which Austria has seized, Servia is not at all discouraged about some day getting them back.

Another important step toward the formation of the proposed Slav empire has just been accomplished with Montenegro. This state also is purely Slav and although the European powers insist on its maintaining a separate existence, Servia has just arranged that in the future practically all of the ministers of the Servian government will do double duty for both Servia and Montenegro. The two while having separate kings, will thus have practically a common government.

In all Servia today the sentiment for Slav unity has become almost a ruling passion, and every Servian has but one conviction. This conviction is that Austria, having already witnessed the amalgamation on its other borders of the German states into a great German empire, and the amalgamation on its southwestern border under the leadership of Savoy of its one time deadly rivals, the Italian states, into a great Italian empire, is irrevocably destined to witness for the third time the same phenomenon in the amalgamation of the Slav provinces and states on its southern border into a united Slav empire.

Rigid enforcement of all state laws regulating moving picture performances, especially the five-minutes-between-films law, is insisted upon by
